Arrest Foils Bandit Ring's Holdup Plans

St. Elizabeths Hospital $40,000 Pay Roll Was to Be Stolen.

4 Banks Here Were to Be Robbed; Mob Linked to $300,000 Thefts.

A daring plan to steal the $40,000 pay roll of St. Elizabeths Hospital has been thwarted by police by a round-up of bank bandits who have stolen $300,000 from banks along the Atlantic seaboard in the past two years.

Only the arrest of one of the participants in the proposed holdup by Detective Sergt. Floyd A. Truscott on a "hunch" prevented the theft of the pay roll of July 1, The Post learned authoritatively last night.

This group of bank terrorists made its headquarters in a large house in nearby Maryland, where its members hid prior to their periodic raids on District financial houses. The location of this mansion is held secret by police, who described it as "large enough to sleep 50 men."

The mob of bandits was formerly led by Barney Neufield, notorious bandit who had his headquarters in New York and who is now doing time in Sing Sing. They had definite plans to hold up the messenger of the National Capital Bank on one of his trips to the Treasury with a sum estimated at from $20,000 to $25,000.

Will Hunt Leader Today.

The youthful bank-bandit sleuths, Sergts. Truscott and Frank O. Brass, will leave today for Philadelphia to ferret out the leader of the band. His henchmen are estimated to number 20, half of which are under arrest in Washington and Philadelphia.

Before the round-up began, the mob had made definite plans to hold up the following banks: Du Pont Circle Branch of the Federal-American National Bank, the Chevy Chase Savings Bank, a bank at Hyattsville, Md., name unknown; the Anacostia Bank, as well as the St. Elizabeths Hospital pay roll messenger and the messenger of the National Capital Bank.

After an intensive man-hunt of more than a year, which took them from New York to Miami and throughout Pennsylvania, Brass and Truscott gathered the evidence against the mob. The gang operated out of New York and Philadelphia. Rarely did one of the gang participate in more than one holdup in a given locality.

In their operations in the District one man was sent here to "spot" the prospective bank. Then the others would come by train, bus and plane to Washington, and make their headquarters in the house in the woods of Maryland.

One of the men would steal an automobile. The others would visit the scene of the prospective holdup to familiarize themselves with the vicinity. On the appointed day, the mob would go to the bank in the car. The holdup would be committed.

Different Escape Routes.

Then the getaway car, known as the "drop" car, would leave with the men. The bandits would be dropped off at intervals, so as to confuse the police in their lookout by changing the number of men in the car. Then they would go by

Farmer Tells Troubles With Dairy Ratings

Declares Score Varies According to Relations With Association.

The mysterious manner in which a dairy farmer's rating by the Health Department varies in direct proportion to his relations with the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, was told last night by Julius Fleischman, a farmer.

Not only that, but officials of the producers' association warned him that he would lose his permit if he didn't do their bidding. And he did lose it. Another strange story he told was this:

In July, 1932, he was having trouble with the producers' association over the price paid for his milk. He was warned that he would lose his permit. The health inspector came around. He was rated at 59, a bad score.

Given Permit Again.

On July 14 of that month, he had lost his permit to ship milk into the District. The Producers' Association told him if he would ship milk to them they would get his permit returned. He agreed and the next day got his permit again.

Health Department inspectors rated him at 99, an excellent score.

"The funny part of it is," said Mr. Fleischman, "I hadn't done a thing to improve the cattle or the barns and they were just as they inspected them 15 days before. It's all very funny."

He bought his farm in 1931. It was the old Providence Hospital farm. He couldn't get a permit to ship his milk into the District as he wanted to. He couldn't get a permit from the Health Department unless he made improvements which would cost him $1,600.

Repair Items Reduced.

So he established a milk route in Maryland. He was doing very well. He was selling raw milk at 8 cents a quart which costs 18 cents in Washington. The Producers Association asked him to ship milk to them. "I can't get a permit," he said.

"Don't worry about that," he was told; "that can be arranged."

It was arranged. The health inspector came to his farm and he was required to erect a sterilizer at a cost of less than $300. He was not required to build a new roof and new floors, which he was told to do when he, on his own initiative, applied for a permit.

"The same inspector who told me to put in $1,600 of repairs, when I first applied on my own, told me to put in only $300 in repairs when the association was helping me," he said.

Says Probe Helped Him.

He broke with the association again in September, 1932. His bottles were broken at the bottle exchange, he said, and he experienced more difficulty with Health Department officials.

But since the expose by The Post of extraordinary milk prices in the District and evidence has been shown which indicates a milk trust is in operation, everything has been pleasant for him, he says.

"The Health Department has been rating me at 99 every month. And this month I received 363 bottles from the bottles exchange. I never received any before March."

Cat "Robs" Cash Till To Pay for Her Meat

Kansas City, July 13 (A.P.).—Kitty Michelle, a Maltese cat owned by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Case, showed photographers today how she takes coins from a cash register to pay the butcher for her breakfast.

The meat shop is in the grocery operated by the Case family, so there were no complaints about the money pilfering.

Factor Tells Of Tortures He Suffered

Denies $50,000 Only Part of Ransom; Arrests in Luer Case.

Chicago, July 13 (A.P.).—Plainly wracked to the breaking point by 12 days of torture by kidnapers, John Factor plunged into a sleep tonight for which he had made a down payment of $50,000.

That was the price he paid the gang before his release last midnight, and reports persisted that more installments were to be met.

Shorn of a 12 days' beard, garbed in lavender pajamas, he propped himself up in bed at his Gold Coast hotel and dictated the latest chapter of his autobiography before dozing off.

As he told his story, county officers sought the cooperation of suburban authorities in a hunt over the countryside for the farm used as a lair by the gangsters.

They held little hope of discovering it. Factor could not describe the rendezvous. He thought 20 men participated in the abduction. He insisted he could identify none.

How Ransom Was Paid.

"I suffered tortures that are impossible for me to describe or for you to believe," he related, blinking eyes that had been blindfolded during all his captivity. He was seized the morning of July 1 while homeward bound from a suburban dance resort.

"The ransom was paid in $5, $10 and $20 bills by friends of mine to friends of the kidnapers in broad daylight at a place outside the city limits of Chicago. No, I can't give any more details about that part of it.

"I was held on the second floor of a farm house which I believe was about 1¼ miles from Lagrange (the suburb where he was released near a police station early today).

"The room was alive with vermin. The kidnapers had the voices of educated men. They treated me fairly enough except for striking me and threatening me with machine guns at times."

Factor said that on the first day of his captivity the kidnapers told him, "You're going for a ride; your friends aren't keeping their word."

Feared Death by Kidnapers.

Factor said he pleaded with them, but that he had feared many times the kidnapers would kill him.

The financier, wanted in England for an alleged $7,000,000 swindle, told his story to a newspaperman selected by a group of reporters. His physicians ruled that only one person could be present with him.

Black Tom Blast Up in Court Again

Claims Commission Seeks Testimony of German in Sabotage Case.

Cleveland, July 13 (A.P.).—Seventeen years of litigation over the famous Black Tom and Kingsland sabotage explosions prior to the United States' entrance into the World War bobbed up in Federal Court here today.

A hearing was started on efforts to force Carl O. Ahrendt, Cleveland manager for the North German Lloyd Steamship Co., to appear before the German-American Mixed Claims Commission and tell what he may know of the explosions.

Robert W. Bonynge, American agent for the commission, who seeks to compel Ahrendt to testify, asserted the Clevelander was a close prewar associate of Frederich Hinsch, a German sabotage agent.

Damage claims out of the two explosions now total $40,000,000. The Black Tom blast occurred at a terminal across the Hudson River from New York, where box cars packed with explosives for the allies were touched off. The Kingsland explosion was at the Kingsland, N. J., plant of the Canadian Car & Foundry Co., where war materials for the allies were being made.

Rev. H. P. Brock Is Discovered In North Wales

Clergyman Who Took Two Capital Boys Abroad Found After Hunt.

The State Department has located in northern Wales, the Rev. H. Priestley Brock, Episcopal clergyman who disappeared last March with two young sons of Robert P. Vinall, an employe of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

The clergyman was found after an intensive search by the State Department, Scotland Yard, and the British Home Office. He disappeared with the two youths last March, taking them from an Episcopal school established at Cockeysville, Md., with funds solicited from Washingtonians.

The case has been taken under advisement by District Attorney Leo A. Rover, at the request of Episcopal Church authorities, who have questioned the clerical status of the Rev. Mr. Brock. The district attorney is undecided what course is to be taken. He is awaiting requests by church authorities and the parents for formal action in the case.

Interviewed last night by a Post reporter, the parents of the boys said they were hopeful that they would soon return to this country. They are anxious for the clergyman to return the youths by September.

Under the British law an alien may remain in the country only six months. This time will elapse in September.

British Oppose Public Works To Aid Jobless

U. S. Delegation at London Backs Program for Shorter Hours.

London, July 13 (A.P.).—Great Britain went on record in the World Economic Conference today as opposed to public works programs a short time after the American delegation had broached a proposal calling for shorter hours of work and increases in wages to compensate for rise in prices as an ameliorative for unemployment.

The American resolution, submitted by Sam. D. McReynolds, of Tennessee, declared unemployment is "one of the gravest problems the governments are confronted with at this time."

The British stand, taken in opposition to a French recommendation, came in the economic commission toward the close of a day in which James M. Cox, of Ohio, had urged continuance of discussion on the remaining agenda subjects despite rejection by the Federal Reserve System of a resolution on central bank cooperation.

The former Governor of Ohio, in what was described as a fighting speech, which "curled the hair" of the conference leaders, outlined the American situation and persuaded the economic committee to continue deliberations on commercial indebtedness and silver, the subjects remaining after the American action on the central bank resolution.

Meanwhile experts went to work on reframing the bank resolution in the belief it might be revamped to meet the approval of the Federal Reserve Board.

U. S. Ogpu Urged As Kidnap Weapon

Chicago, July 13 (A.P.).—Warfare on kidnapers through a Nation-wide secret police body with branches in every city was suggested today by Frank J. Loesch, 81-year-old head of the Chicago Crime Commission and veteran civic fighter of crime.

"Kidnaping has become the greatest menace to the public in modern times," Mr. Loesch said, "and the only way we can defeat the kidnapers is to fight them with their own weapons—secrecy and armed forces."

Mr. Loesch suggested that the secret organization be patterned after the United States Secret Service, with the identity of every official and man in the ranks unknown to the public or the underworld.

Court Decides Potency Of Beer Is Up to Juries

Topeka, Kans., July 13 (A.P.).—The Kansas Supreme Court ruled late today the question whether 3.2 per cent beer is intoxicating and consequently in violation of the State's prohibition laws is one of fact for the judge or jury sitting as trier of facts to pass upon.

The court's decision was handed down in the first 3.2 beer case to come before it since Congress legalized the brew, and it reversed Judge J. G. Somers of Reno County District Court who had enjoined two Hutchinson men from selling beer.

Civil Service Hunts 3,000 New Positions

Word From White House Awaited to Activate Rehiring Policy.

Ousted U. S. Employes Must Apply for Job Preference.

By Robert C. Albright.

White House instructions, putting cogs in the President's clear-cut reemployment policy, last night were awaited by the Civil Service Commission and half a dozen new Federal emergency agencies.

Pending directions, the Civil Service Commission disclosed a Washington list of 3,000 Federal jobless is now ready and available to any of the gradually expanding new agencies for the asking.

Henry B. Mitchell, chairman of the commission, with Mrs. Lucille F. McMillan, the new woman member, called at the White House yesterday. Chairman Mitchell insisted the reemployment plans were not discussed and no directions given by the President.

Must Ask Listing.

At the commission it was said all that agency knows of the President's reemployment policy is what it has read in published reports of the White House interview. A similar expression in some of the new emergency units gave rise to belief that specific instructions are necessary to put teeth in the program.

The commission takes the position it has no authority to supply names of jobless to the new agencies unless they are called for. The list is compiled, however, and may be put to use not only by Government establishments requesting help, but even by private business concerns desirous of hiring qualified workers, the commission made clear.

At the same time it became known that Civil Service workers released from their jobs or furloughed for three months or more are not automatically placed on the so-called reemployment list given preference by the President, but must formally apply to the commission for listing. Because of failure to apply, there obviously are hundreds of Federal jobless not yet included in the list of 3,000, it was said.

Farley States Position.

Solace to some of the workers covered into the Civil Service by executive orders during Republican administrations was offered yesterday by Postmaster General Farley. He expressed conviction that the President will not go back many years in "unblanketing" such employes.

Mr. Farley took this position when informed of the plight of a Bureau of Standards woman worker who was covered into the service ten years ago, and who now fears the loss of her job.

"I do not think it would be fair to go back that far," he said.

Some Opposition Arises.

Postmaster General Farley definitely indicated he would support the President in his request for preparation of legislation providing competitive civil service examinations for all classes of postmasterships. Some Congressional Democrats, fearing the loss of patronage, immediately took opposition to the President's postoffice plan. Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, said he did not think Congress would pass such a law.

The White House proposal for reemploying Federal workers released from the government departments in the last four months, disclosed by the President Wednesday, provides for preferential appointment of legitimate Civil Service employes to the new emergency agencies. The President indicated employes "blanketed" into the service by Executive order would not receive this consideration.

$3,000,000 Work Fund for Capital

In the allotments from the Federal Public Works fund, already compiled and approved by the administration, it is estimated that approximately $3,000,000 will be expended on construction projects within the District.

Considerable construction work within the District is expected to be made by the Department of Agriculture from its allotment, and it is likely other departments may use a portion of their fund grants in remodelling and improving their buildings in Washington.

The principal aid to unemployment conditions in Washington, however undoubtedly will be from allotments approved for remodelling work at hospitals, memorials and charitable institutions in the District. The Arlington Memorial Bridge, St. Elizabeths and Freedmen's hospitals, and Howard University are expected to be the recipients of the principal allotments.

92 Dismissed From Federal Printing Office

Veteran Employes Lose Jobs Under 30-Year Retirement Order.

The blow that most of its veteran employes have been expecting for weeks fell yesterday at the Government Printing Office, bleak building of North Capitol street. Ninety-two workers, some of them women, received notice of retirement under the 30-year clause.

"We feared it was coming, but hoped against hope."

The feeling with which the designated employes received the news may be summed up in those words. One, who asked that his name not be used, betrayed little regret at the approaching end of his 38 years' service, but vehemently attacked the 30-year provision as one which would deprive the G. P. O. of valuable workers and officials who will be difficult to replace.

George H. Carter, public printer, was out of the city when the notices were distributed late yesterday. He is in Chicago attending the convention of United Typothetate of America, where a code for the printing industry is being formulated.

Effective July 31.

Retirements ordered yesterday will take effect July 31. In the meantime those affected will be permitted to take whatever leave is coming to them. They quit the service on maximum annuity of $100 a month, from which 3½ per cent will be deducted and returned to the retirement fund.

Approximately 25 of the 92 are on the night force. Almost all the 30-year workers are in the printing establishment, with few in other departments.

Three to be taken from the job proofroom alone are: William H. Drayton, 2807 Conecticut avenue; Harvey W. Graham, 12 Rhode Island avenue northeast, and Edwin

"Scotland Yard" Urged To Guard Film Stars

Hollywood, July 13 (A.P.).—Steps toward the formation of a Hollywood "Scotland Yard" were advocated today as film celebrities, feeling a bit jittery as a result of the recent wave of kidnapings, depleted the ranks of unemployed bodyguards.

Many stars of cinema land during the past few days have employed private police for themselves or their children in fear that an effort will be made to abduct them. Others have had such protection regularly.

Steel Plan, Expected by Government, Still Is Being Held Up.

Efforts Made to Extend Provisions of Cotton Regulations.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

Impetus was given yesterday to the administration's drive to line up industry behind its economic recovery program when four additional industrial codes were submitted to the National Industrial Recovery Administration.

The new codes dealt with the bituminous, oil, coats and suits and general contracting industries. The code of that giant among industries, steel, was not submitted, however, despite announcements that it would be.

Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, fixed next Thursday for beginning hearings on the codes submitted by the oil and coats and suits industries, bringing to six the number of codes which will be under hearing next week. More than 50 other codes representing small industries or units have been received and are being held in abeyance pending disposition of those of greater importance from the standpoint of employment.

Seek to Extend Code.

Efforts are being made to extend to other branches of the textile industry the provisions of the cotton code, which has been approved and is to become effective on Monday. The cotton code provides for a 40-hour maximum work week and a minimum wage of $12 and $13 a week for the South and the North, respectively.

The cotton industry is afraid its code will increase their production costs to their disadvantage in competition with woolen, silk and rayon manufacturers. Gen. Johnson is seeking to get these to accept the cotton code.

What happened to the expected steel code recovery officials professed not to know, although Myron Taylor, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Co., promised President Roosevelt several days ago the code would be submitted promptly. It was reported that Gen. Johnson had again found something objectionable to the industry's proposal. He recently said he had sent it back three times.

Receipt of an acceptable code from the steel industry would be regarded by administration officials as definitely marking the acceptance of the recovery program by major industries.

Still Consider Pressure.

Although heartened considerably by recent developments, officials still are considering what they shall do to bring pressure to bear if the industries controlled by the great captains of industry and finance do not quickly come forward and cooperate. The proposal to set up general rules prescribing maximum hours and minimum wages for

Codes Sent In By Bituminous And Oil Groups

Steel Project, Expected by Gen. Johnson, Still Is Being Held Up.

classes of workers throughout the country has not been abandoned.

Submission of the bituminous code marked a new era in that industry. It was framed by operators from 13 States and representatives of organized labor participating on questions involving hours, wages and working conditions. It is the first code submitted which has been arrived at by collective bargaining.

It does not, however, represent complete accord between the two groups. There is considerable difference on the question of hours. The operators propose an average 36-hour work week, to be achieved by 26 weeks of four eight-hour days and 26 weeks of five eight-hour days. The union representatives, headed by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers of America, want a straight six-hour day, five-day week. It was agreed that this question should be threshed out in the forthcoming open hearing and left to the recovery administration to decide.

Basic Wage Scale.

The code fixes a $5 a day basic wage for underground workers, and $4 for workers above ground. A 5 per cent differential is allowed southern operators.

Those operators subscribing to the code represented about 25 to 28 per cent of the tonnage, but they were confident it would serve as a basis for agreement among other groups. Neither the Rockefeller nor the Mellon coal interests in the territory covered were represented at the conference, nor subscribed to the code. The code prohibited employment of child labor below ground.

The oil code was submitted by the American Petroleum Institute and was made public by Gen. Johnson, who "emphasized" that the recovery administration had merely accepted it and "assumes no responsibility for the code and has given no implied or direct, advance approval to any of its provisions."

Bill of Competition.

The code proposed a bill of fair competition, including control of production by allotment to producers, minimum prices to protect producers and maximum prices to protect consumers, and sets up a committee to govern the industry within the approved limits. The President would fix the minimum and maximum prices.

The proposed minimum wages range from 40 to 47 cents an hour and the work week was fixed at 40 hours.

John B. Elliott, representing a committee of independents, urged them to submit codes and attend the hearings. He proposed a six-hour day with a 36-hour week and a wage of not less than 50 cents an hour.

So many involved questions are tied up in the proposed codes that the recovery administration has given special notice of the hearings to the governors of all oil producing States and requested they attend or send personal representatives as well as representatives of State regulating bodies.

"The effect of the public hearing in this instance," Gen. Johnson said, "will necessarily bring in not merely consideration of the problems of the oil industry from the standpoint of its internal government, but consideration of the question of the proper utilization of a great national resource in conformity with public policies of the Federal Government and of the several States affected."

Child Labor Eliminated.

The coats and suits code provide for elimination of child labor, minimum wages ranging from 50 cents to $1 an hour and a 40-hour work week. It provides for maintenance of an unemployment insurance fund and prohibits overtime work. The labor provisions were arrived at through collective bargaining.

It is proposed garments made under its provisions shall carry a national recovery administration tag as a help in eliminating substandard and sweatshop conditions in the industry. A code of ethical trade and business practices was embodied.

The national recovery act, subscribers to the code said, "will have a salutary effect upon this industry," and the code "will assure that competitive practices destructive to the interests of the public will be eliminated, standards of labor will be improved, unemployment reduced and relieved and the industry generally rehabilitated."

At the same time, it was said, the code would "be the means of compelling the recalcitrants in the industry, who until now have created the confusion and substandard conditions," to fall in line with a program to establish practical standards of living.

The contractors announced themselves they had submitted their code on July 11. It provides for a 150-hour work month, as compared with an estimated 206-hour month estimated at present. Minimum wages would be established regionally or locally by mutual agreement with approval of the President. Pending fixing of these minimum wages, it was proposed to take the wage scales fixed by various State bodies as determining. A central control committee also would be established.

Bread Price Hike Found Justified

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Wallace said yesterday that investigation had shown that in virtually all cases where bread price increases of 3 cents or more had been reported bakers have increased the size of their loaves.

He made public a report of an investigation by Henry Stude, president of the American Bakers Association, covering ten places where increases were reported.

It said that almost all cases of reported excessive increases had proved unfounded. Wallace has contended that some bakers were using the 30-cent-a-bushel tax on wheat milling as an excuse for "unreasonable" price increases.

150 See Girl Cut Up by Saw

Shrieking Blade Apparently Severs Body in Latest Trick Shown by Wizards on Same Spot Where Indian Medicine Men Worked.

Seattle, July 13 (A.P.).—Western wizards today climbed on the stage where Indian magicians performed black magic 500 years ago, and showed a brand new line of thaumaturgy, legerdemain, and plain and fancy tricks.

The scenery was different, but the ideas were much the same, when 150 members of the International Brotherhood of Magicians gathered here to organize a Pacific Coast division.

Ages ago, near Seattle, the Pacific Northwest medicine man's trick was to bludgeon his beautiful assistant with a stone ax and throw her into a pit of fire. Today the delegates were shown how to cut her up with an electric buzz saw and burn her in an oven.

But when the screen was removed, she came out smiling, just as her red-skinned predecessor did.

The buzz saw trick, presented by "Virgil," of Port Townsend, Wash., was a baffling illusion, inasmuch as the girl was "sawed" in plain view, the shrieking blade apparently going right through her and shearing supporting planks like butter.

The Indians of this district had an illusion whereby the magician was thrown into a birch bark hut containing a pit filled with fire, and emerged unscathed. It took the American Ethnological Society many years to learn it was done by smearing him with mud while the smoke hid him.

The delegates began the day with a new gag, whereby a magician walks up to any given citizen and cuts his necktie in half with scissors. When the citizen squawks, the magician hands back the tie, with no cuts visible.

The old-time Indian medicine man around Seattle used to claim his magic (and he had about 600 tricks) was of some value in curing illness, chasing away devils or producing rain, but his successors contend it's only good fun, with nothing up their sleeves except maybe a royal flush.

County Home Inmate Has $10,000 in Bank

Omaha, Nebr., July 13 (A.P.).—J. R. Nichelson, superintendent of the county home near here, today said he had discovered that an inmate, Miss Nellie Martin, 62-year-old former Philadelphia teacher, had at least $10,000 on deposit in a Philadelphia bank.

Confronted with this knowledge, he said, Miss Martin paid the county $531 to cover her board and room for the past year and a half. She was then moved to a local home for the aged.

Billion Starts On Way to Aid Recovery Plan

Long List of River, Flood Projects Approved in Public Works Fund.

(Associated Press.)

Approximately a billion dollars of Federal money started on its way to the pockets of the unemployed last night with approval by the Cabinet board in charge of the public works fund of a long list of river and harbor and flood control projects.

The board approved a plan to divide the Nation into 10 regions for administering public works advances to States and municipalities.

The size of the flood control and river and harbor program approved yesterday was withheld pending the indorsement of President Roosevelt, but allotments already made for other kinds of Federal and local projects amounted to about $750,000,000.

Projects totaling about a half billion dollars were recommended by the War Department, but were understood to have been cut drastically.

They are probably due for further reduction by the President, as Secretary Ickes said he had trimmed the Federal allocation of $65,000,000 to be made public today.

Mr. Ickes said approval of the regional divisions cleared the way to appointment by President Roosevelt early next week of the regional administrators and State advisory boards.

This part of the program has been held up pending the regional setup and the administration has been concentrating on getting the Federal program going.

In addition to approving the $65,000,000 for Federal projects, the President has allocated $400,000,000 to public roads and $238,000,000 to naval construction, while the board has approved a plan for dividing $50,000,000 among road projects in Federal parks, national forests and Indian reservations.

Mr. Ickes predicted yesterday the Navy would not get the $73,000,000 it has requested for naval shore stations, gun elevation and recon-000,000 already allotted for new conditioning in addition to the $238,-struction.

The ten regions announced by the board were:

New England; New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey; Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana and Ohio; North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa and Wyoming; Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon; California, Nevada, Utah and Arizona; Texas, New Mexico and Louisiana; Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, and Arkansas; Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and North Carolina.

The Navy's $238,000,000 construction program was outlined to President Roosevelt yesterday by Admiral William V. Standley, chief of operations.

92 Veteran U. S. Workers Dismissed

A. Sullivan, 522 Third street northwest.

Mr. Drayton, who is 62, was hired as a compositor in 1894. In the interim he has served the G. P. O. with the Interstate Commerce Commission, the land office in Gainsville, Fla., the General Land Office here, and the Department of Commerce. Since 1922 he has been a proofreader in the big, red brick plant.

On Force 35 Years.

Mr. Graham joined the force 35 years ago and has been on the job continuously in the same building.

Senators and representatives undoubtedly will miss John S. Hannbly, a bookbinder, who was frequently consulted by them. He lives at 5713 Ninth street northwest.

More than 3,000 years of service and experience are represented by yesterday's action. It is believed that many of the retired employes will seek work elsewhere, particularly in the printing trade.

All Printer Candidates Likely to Be Rejected

All the present candidates for the office of Public Printer are likely to be rejected by the administration, it was learned yesterday from an authoritative source.

A number of recommendations have been made to the President, it was said. None of these met with complete approval. A further list has been requested. These additional names will be studied before the appointment is made.

Mrs. Sadie L. Evans, 73, Dies at Her Home Here

Mrs. Sadie L. Evans, mother of Miss Orrena Louise Evans, associate librarian of the Department of Agriculture, died yesterday at her home, 1830 R street northwest, following a protracted illness. She was 73 years old.

Mrs. Evans was a native of Dodgeville, Wis. She had been a resident of Washington about four years. She was a member of All Souls' Church.

I. C. C. Drops 20 Excess-Profit Railway Cases

Recapture Clause Repeal Basis of Action; Law Proved Difficult.

(Associated Press.)

The Interstate Commerce Commission struck from its docket yesterday twenty cases that had been brought against railroads in an effort to recapture half of the earnings above 6 per cent the roads had piled up in prosperous years.

The clause of the transportation law which allowed the Government to recapture the earnings was repealed at the extra session of Congress.

The twenty cases dismissed included some in which the roads had paid large sums into the Treasury for this purpose. The money was to be invested and retained for loans to weak roads.

The recapture provision was difficult to enforce and had resulted in copious litigation.

About 100 railroads paid into the Treasury $10,679,086, all except a few thousand dollars being paid under protest. A few small roads did not protest, the sums being so small as to make litigation too expensive.

The money was invested by the Treasury and up to the time of repeal had earned $2,557,613 in interest, bringing the total of the fund to $13,277,598.

This fund, is now being divided among the roads which paid it in.

Only one case ever reached final decision by the courts. In this one instance—the St. Louis and O'Fallon case—the commission was reversed by the United States Supreme Court because of errors in making valuations.

Mrs. Frances Krikawa Dies on Way to Capital

Mrs. Frances Krikawa, widow of Leo C. Krikawa, former manager of the National Press Club, died yesterday in Marietta, Ohio, it was learned here. Mrs. Krikawa was en route to Washington from Chicago.

She was the daughter of Mrs. Mary A. McCann, of 4714 Fifteenth street northwest, and had lived here most of her life. Her husband died in 1928.

Mrs. Krikawa also is survived by three brothers, Richard, a member of the Daily News staff; Breden, of Chicago, and Joseph, of this city, and four sisters, Miss Mary C. McCann, Miss Helen McCann, Mrs. George P. Grau, jr., and Mrs. Franklin Sorrell, all of Washington.

Amount Is Undetermined; Spinners to Meet With U. S. Group Today.

By Lawrence Sullivan.

Secretary Wallace revealed plans yesterday to apply the processing tax to cotton about August 1, the beginning of the new crop year.

The amount of the tax has not yet been determined finally, but spinners' representatives from all sections of the country are to meet here today with department officials to work out the essential table of conversion factors to be applied to the various grades of cotton cloth.

Farm leaders estimated that the cotton tax would be approximately 2.7 cents a pound, or about $13.50 a bale. This tax, levied on about 5,500,000 bales entering domestic consumption channels annually, would yield approximately $75,000,000 to be returned to cotton farmers who contract to reduce acreage.

The emergency agricultural adjustment law requires that the processing taxes be applied as nearly as possible at the beginning of a new crop year.

Acreage Cuts Checked.

While his staff pressed forward with the task of preparing for the processing tax, a special corps of accountants and tabulators were put to work yesterday on returns from the acreage reduction drive launched two weeks ago in the sixteen cotton States.

Although there is some doubt whether the initial objective of 10,000,000 acres has been realized, Secretary Wallace intimated that failure of the acreage quota probably would not force abandonment of the plan. Planters were urged to sign contracts to plow under or leave unpicked approximately one-fourth of their acreage. But hundreds of thousands of signed contracts have not yet reached the department.

"Within twenty-four hours we hope to make a definite announcement whether the plan will be put into effect," Secretary Wallace said yesterday. "Meantime, we are awaiting complete information from the field."

The acreage reduction drive closed officially at midnight Wednesday. The last tabulation of reported contracts indicated about 5,500,000 acres, or about half the national quota, signed up. Department officials do not know as yet how many individual contracts have been signed.

More Data Awaited.

"Offers reported to Washington to date do not yet cover sufficient acreage to justify an announcement that the cotton plan will be put into effect," Secretary Wallace added. "Field workers still are engaged in completing inspections and other necessary work of concluding the campaign."

In some instances, the State reports of the acreage signed up in the campaign have not been sustained by examination of the individual contracts.

In other States many of the contracts were found to cover land of extremely low yield per acre, while in the more fertile areas fewer growers accepted the plan.

Secretary Wallace wants to reduce this year's anticipated crop by about 3,000,000 bales. That quota is not an inflexible one, but the acreage withdrawn must be sufficient to insure the successful operation of the cotton plan as a whole. Farm leaders, however, interpreted official preparations for the processing tax as assurance that the acreage plan ultimately would be proclaimed operative.

Today's conference with the textile manufacturers is to establish a mathematical formula for translating pounds of cotton into yards of cloth and thread. The task is a difficult one, for every weave and pattern is of different weight, and virtually every grade of cotton produces a distinctive weight yarn. All of these variables must be taken into account before the processing tax can be assessed against the cotton mills.

Italy's Jobless Fewer.

Rome, July 13 (A.P.).—Official figures released today showed that the number of unemployed in Italy was reduced 116,000 during June. The total now stands at 884,000.

Wife to Pay

Sued Mate's Duck Thefts to Stop as Judge Rules Alimony for Him.

Chicago, July 13 (A.P.).—At midnight last night, man began to get a break in the alimony business, fortunately for Joseph Koska, for now he can eat without stealing from his wife's barn-yard.

The Graham bill, which became effective at midnight, meant that a woman may be ordered by court to pay temporary alimony to her husband while she sues for divorce and he brings cross suit.

Mrs. Kunegunda Koska threw the boomerang that hit her today. She asked a divorce on grounds of cruelty. He rejoined with a bill charging that she starved him and sent him out to the barn to sleep. Then in came Mrs. Koska with a plea for an injunction to keep her husband from filching ducks and chickens from the farm.

"I had to take them, judge," Koska explained. "I didn't have anything to eat and my wife had the farm."

Judge Joseph Sabath ordered Mrs. Koska to pay her husband 50 cents a day alimony and supply him with milk and eggs, provided he leave the hencoop alone until the divorce suits are decided.

Coal Code Sets Minimum Pay Of $5 Per Day

Union and Operators Fail to Agree on Working Hours.

(Associated Press.)

A delegation of bituminus coal operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America yesterday handed Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial administrator, the agreement they had worked out covering wages and competition in their industry.

No agreement was reached on working hours, and this was left for decision at the hearings on the agreement, the time for which will be set by Johnson later.

John L. Lewis, president of the Mine Workers, said after the agreement was submitted that although the operators who subscribed to the code produced only from 25 to 28 per cent of the Nation's annual soft coal tonnage, he expected the code to be adopted eventually for the entire industry.

The code provided a minimum basic underground wage of $5 a day. On maximum working hour, the union urged a 30-hour week with a 5-hour day, and the operators held out for a 35-hour average week with an 8-hour day.

It also provided a 5 per cent differential for fields south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, northern West Virginia and western Pennsylvania excepted.

A group of Iowa representatives, headed by Sam Ballentyne, walked out of the conference before the final vote was taken. Ballentyne refused to comment on their action.

Meanwhile, it was understood that a small group of representatives of the Pittsburgh Coal Co. and the Consolidated Coal Co. of West Virginia had conferred yesterday in New York on their ideas for a code.

The Northern group, which opposes the United Mine Workers, was reported to have a meeting arranged with large Southern interests, also classed as "nonunion," next Monday in New York to discuss the possibility of their getting together on a single code.

U. S. to Require Milk Licenses On Distribution

President Approves Plan for Trade Marketing Agreements.

(Associated Press.)

The Nation's milkmen were informed yesterday that under all trade marketing agreements thus far submitted for urban fluid milk and cream the Roosevelt administration had decided to employ from the start its chief enforcement weapon—requirement of all distributors and processors concerned to operate under a Federal license.

Secretary Wallace announced the policy after it had been approved by President Roosevelt and Attorney General Cummings. The licensing provisions will go into effect at the same time that the first agreement covering the Chicago milkshed becomes effective. The Chicago agreement, he said, would be accepted within a few days, to be followed by others soon after.

The Agriculture Secretary said the decision to license processors and distributors at the outset recognized that it is "beyond human nature to expect 100 per cent voluntary agreement."

For more than two weeks the question of whether to employ licensing has been the subject of conferences. Farm administrators at first refused to employ it as being "too drastic," while representatives of the Chicago milk industry, national dairy organizations and the American Farm Bureau Federation insisted that it be used.

The decision will have deeply ramifying effects. More than 100 cities are expected to have agreements fixing minimum prices to farmers, processors, distributors and consumers within a few months.

Keenan Seeks Aid of Public In Kidnap War

Special Guards Assigned to Protect President's Grandchildren.

(United Press.)

Joseph Keenan, a square-jawed fighting man who has been drafted by the Federal Government to run racketeers out of business, pleaded yesterday for public cooperation in his battle to stamp out kidnaping.

His plea came at a time when it was learned that special guards had been assigned to President Roosevelt's grandchildren because of the outbreak of abductions within the last three weeks. Russell Wood, the youthful Secret Service man who guarded John Coolidge when the latter's father was President, has been stationed at Rye Beach, N. H. There he will guard Sarah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt.

Another agent, whose name was not disclosed at the White House, is at Little Boar's Head, watching "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall, the children of Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall.

Keenan, on the job as special assistant to Attorney General Cummings for less than a week, said he was devoting all his time to the war against kidnapers. He is charged with the general problem of combating racketeering, but he feels the kidnaping crisis is so acute that he must devote all his time to it.

Rules for Victims' Families.

His office is bare—there has been no time yet to install furniture, rugs and elaborate ash trays—and Keenan sits behind a battered yellow desk that in the last week has become the clearing house for all criminal information gathered by the Federal Government's far-flung agencies.

"I don't like to say this," he said, "but there have been kidnaping cases in this country where the police work was bungled. We hope we won't bungle any. I think the power of the Federal Government is feared in the underworld. I also think the people have confidence in the Federal Government.

"Let me give you some rules. If people—members of families from which a person has been kidnaped—would follow these rules they would make our job lots easier.

"Here they are:

"1. Let the Federal Government—that is, the Bureau of Investigation—know about the kidnaping right away. Don't write, but telephone or telegraph us. There's no sense in giving the kidnapers one or two days' start on us. It's just like locking the barn after the horse has been stolen.

"2. Rest assured that we will guard your secret jealously. We are going to try to establish a covenant of secrecy with every family that is victimized by kidnapers.

Reporting of Threats.

"3. If you have any advance knowledge of the kidnaping, give us that, too. By that I mean if you receive threatening letters, get in touch with a Federal agent quickly. You might as well avail yourself of the experts that the Federal Government employs to decipher and compare the handwritings of criminals.

"4. Remember that we are just as anxious as you are to get the victim back alive and well. That's our first consideration. After that we tackle the job of running down the kidnapers.

"5. Save every scrap of evidence you have. If the kidnapers leave clews, don't disturb them until experts have had a chance to get there and look over the situation.

"6. Don't talk to friends or about the kidnaping. It won't do any good and it may do a lot of harm.

"7. Remember that if you hold back any information from us—no matter how trivial it seems to you—you are unwittingly allying yourself with the kidnapers."

Winging On!

Italian Air Armada Lands in New Brunswick on Chicago Hop.

Shediac, N. B., July 13 (A.P.).—Gen. Italo Balbo and his squadron of 24 Italian seaplanes, bound for the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, arrived here late today, completing a flight of 800 miles from Cartwright, Labrador, the fifth leg in the largest long distance mass, air movement in history.

The armada started its take-off from Cartwright, where it arrived late yesterday following the most hazardous stage of its trip—the 1,500-mile North Atlantic crossing from Reykjavik, Iceland, to Labrador—at 8:20 a. m. Eastern standard time. The last of the groups of three got away by 8:55 a. m.

Sweeping in from the North in close formation, the first group of three arrived at 4:30 p. m. Atlantic daylight time (2:30 p. m., Eastern standard time). Gen. Balbo, the Italian air minister, was piloting the leading plane. By 4:58 p. m., Atlantic daylight time, all the planes had arrived and were stretched across Shediac Bay.

Gen. Balbo, after seeing all of his charges safely down, stepped into a motorboat at 5:20 p. m. (3:20 p. m., Eastern standard time), and was taken to the wharf, along with five of his officers. Smiling and happy, he greeted the officials lined up waiting to receive him.

The next stage of the flight is to Montreal, a distance of 600 miles. From that metropolis the final stage of the trip lies to Chicago, 870 miles away.

Arbuckle's Third Wife Gets His $2,000 Estate

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—The estate of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle was disclosed today as amounting to not more than $2,000, with the granting of letters of administration to his widow, Mrs. Addie McPhail Arbuckle.

Mrs. Arbuckle, who was the film comedian's third wife, said she was the only heir. She said her husband left no real estate and personal property which does not exceed $2,000. Arbuckle made no will.

Sprague Urges Three Months' Parley Recess

Returns With Moley, Who Will Report Directly to Roosevelt.

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—Dr. Oliver M. W. Sprague, returning from London today with Raymond Moley, Assistant Secretary of State, said he believed the World Economic Conference should adjourn for at least three months while internal conditions in various countries improved.

"I think that the practical thing is a recess of the conference with a certain amount of work going forward by some of the subcommittees and experts, exploring particular questions," said Dr. Sprague, an economic advisor to the American delegation.

Prof. Moley, who went to London after a dramatic meeting off Cape Cod with President Roosevelt, issued a 50-word statement saying he would report to the Chief Executive and the State Department. Accompanying him were Herbert Bayard Swope, his personal advisor, and Edmund Day, the delegation's technical advisor.

Dr. Sprague expressed the belief that "something might emerge after a recess of the conference.

"The entire internal program, as the President has said, takes precedence over arrangements with other countries," he added. "Within three months it will be possible to tell better than it is now how the internal program is developing."

Asked why an American delegation was sent to London if the Government held that view, Dr. Sprague said:

"Consider all that has happened since March 4. It is more than you could humanly expect that all the complicated measures that have been passed and the policies that have been adopted could have been foreseen."

It is the better part of valor, he said, to go forward in the present situation "as if we were in a sailboat in a fog."

Texas Trees, Houses Damaged by Winds

Carthage, Tex., July 13 (A.P.).—Severe winds unrooted several houses, uprooted trees and damaged communication lines over an area approximately 150 miles long extending from Paris, Tex., to Carthage today. No casualties were reported.

At Mount Pleasant the winds drove together two parked motor cars, wrecking both of them.

Woman Linked In Kidnaping Of Physician

Victim of Attackers Tells About Offer Made for Operation.

St. Paul, Minn., July 13 (A.P.).—Dr. Walter Hedberg told police tonight of an incident involving a mysterious woman and marked money as a possible solution to an attack upon him by four men who attempted to force another doctor to perform a mutilating operation upon him.

Both doctors were recovering tonight from painful injuries inflicted by their attackers. The other doctor, E. J. Engberg, was beaten, drugged and left in his automobile in the path of an approaching railroad train after he had refused to mutilate Hedberg.

Hedberg, president of the Minnesota Chiropractors Association, said a woman came to his office July 5, identified herself as Miss Irene Plazo, and asked him to perform an illegal operation.

She offered $15 in bills, Hedberg said, "and there's a lot more where this came from." Upon finding that she had given him a fictitious name and address, Dr. Hedberg said, he accused her of being a party to an attempt to "frame him."

She hurried from the office, he told police, leaving the money behind. Later he found the money had been marked.

Hedberg gave police the name of a man he said was his enemy.

Miss Perkins, House Member Ask for Better Labor Status

Institute Also Listens to Views of Japanese and Chinese.

Charlottesville, Va., July 13 (A.P.).—Labor and employment problems held the spotlight of the Virginia Institute of Public Affairs today with the discussions on domestic and international aspects hinging on addresses by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, and Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland.

Miss Perkins, in her second appearance before the institute, told the unemployment insurance round table that provisions for such insurance are likely to be included in two or three of the industrial codes of fair competition now being formulated.

Chih Meng, associate director of the China Institute in America, New York, asserted that developments in the Far East during the last year and a half "are alarming to those who thought the new order was here."

"If the Chinese people are not left alone to freely work out their political destiny, and if peace machinery proves impotent to guarantee them this freedom, then they may be compelled to undergo a second childhood in reverting to the short-cut method of dictatorship and militarism to struggle for survival," he said.

Mr. Lewis said the preamble of the international labor organization, the world-wide arm of the League of Nations, which is designed to remove the "injustice, hardship and privation" suffered by labor, referred to the need of "humane conditions" in respect to hours of labor, labor supply, prevention of unemployment, adequate living wage, protection against sickness and accident and provision for old age and injury, for securing "the permanent peace of the world."

"Here," he said, "is a program worthy of the highest contribution man can make."

Setting forth the Chinese position, Chih Meng said on account of its peculiar background the development of the Chinese nation has not been so much influenced by or dependent upon political readjustments as that of a modern Western nation.

"The Chinese people still believe in 'to live and let live,'" he said. "The international situation has exerted and will continue to exert influence which will mold the political future of China."

Mr. Akagi, continuing his discussion, said, "Manchurians are better off today under the new regime of Manchukuo than before 1931, under the Chang war-lordism and tyranny."

"The League of Nations is built upon a noble idea, and Japan cooperated with it unreservedly during the past ten years," he asserted. "Now it's turned out to be a regrettable source of disappointment to her. Its ready sympathy with China and its adoption of the technic of conflict ended disastrously. In the end it may succeed in keeping China's esteem by losing Japan's and become a purely European affair, without Japan and the United States."

New Comparison Axiom Is Set Up by Cummings

A new standard of comparison was set up by Attorney General Cummings while he was being questioned by newspapermen. He was asked about a rumor that he was to be appointed Ambassador to some unidentified country.

"If you can think of anything less tangible than a vacuum," Mr. Cummings smiled, "that story is it."

Hopes Growing For Reopening Detroit Banks

Edsel Ford in Forefront as Arbitrator After Probe Is Adjourned.

Detroit, July 13 (A.P.).—With Edsel Ford in the foreground as arbitrator and a concession from the Federal Government a matter of public record, 800,000 depositors in Detroit's two closed national banks tonight saw hopes of reorganization, and eventual return of their nearly $300,000,000 in tied-up deposits.

Ford today obtained a sudden adjournment of the one-man grand jury that for nearly five weeks has been investigating causes of the closing of the two banks, most of the banker witnesses placing the blame on the lap of the Federal Government. Simultaneously there came word from Washington that plans are under way for organizing a new national bank here with a capital of $5,000,000, most of that amount already subscribed.

"Negotiations are in progress in Washington, and we do not desire that anything be done locally which would endanger them," said Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., and son of Henry Ford, in explaining his request for the jury adjournment. "We thought it would be better to hold things as they are for the time being."

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—A plan for adjustment of the debt of the City of Detroit, involving a refunding operation of approximately $290,000,000 was announced this afternoon by the bondholders refunding committee of which B. A. Thompkins, vice president of the Bankers Trust Co., of New York is chairman.

Arrest Thwarts Plans of Bandits different routes to a rendezvous in Philadelphia.

Only one man would carry the guns and the money. He, like the others, would go to Philadelphia alone. If he was arrested, he would be the only one involved because of the money evidence.

They would "hide out" in Philadelphia until another holdup was to be staged. Perhaps the next holdup would be in Philadelphia or New Jersey. When they came here they all held a rendezvous at the mansion, where plans were perfected.

On May 31, Truscott became suspicious of the actions of men in an automobile who were closely observing banking houses. He followed them to Laurel, Md., where he placed under arrest Spencer Walden, 31 years old; his wife, Rebecca, 31 years old, and Joseph Adams, 31 years old, all of Philadelphia.

Walden Is Rearrested.

He was unable to connect them with any bank robberies because of the absence of witnesses. Pictures of Walden were subsequently identified and he was rearrested in Philadelphia June 28. This halted plans for the St. Elizabeths pay roll robbery, which was to occur July 1.

Adams was taken into custody in Philadelphia Sunday. He is being held there for the robbery of the Lehigh National Bank & Trust Co. He also is said to have participated in the holdup of the Washington Mechanics and Savings Bank April 6.

The mob, being held in Philadelphia and Washington, have been linked, with the following holdups: Washington Mechanics and Savings Bank, Eighth and G streets southeast, loot, $7,639; Georgia Avenue Branch of the Washington Mechanics and Savings Bank, June 10, 1932, loot, $9,032; East Capitol Street Branch of the Washington Mechanics and Savings Bank, January 15, 1932, loot $14,136. This group has also been identified as participants in the $18,000 holdup of the Lehigh National Bank & Trust Co., in Philadelphia.

Auto Thefts Admitted.

Walden admits stealing an automobile from a salesman January 12, 1932, on New York avenue northeast. This car was used in the holdup of the East Capitol branch. He also admits stealing automobiles in Camden and Philadelphia, which were used in the other holdups.

The search for the bandits was regarded as so important that Chief of Detectives Frank S. W. Burke made a trip to Philadelphia two weeks ago. With police officials of that city he made plans for a concerted drive on the bank mob, which has resulted in a series of arrests in the past two weeks. Others had been under arrest and some are under indictment.

John Barr was arrested here last week and turned over to Philadelphia. Henry Johnson, Louis Wagner and Joseph Adams were arrested in Philadelphia Sunday on a police underworld foray.

Walden is held here. Others under indictment and in custody are Max Zove, Abe Raifer and John Cahill.

Nevada Divorce Case Thrown Out by Judge

Reno, Nev., July 13 (A.P.).—The divorce case of Harry H. Hunnewell, wealthy Bostonian, against Helen Cirese Hunnewell, of Chicago, was dismissed by Judge J. Emmett Walsh in a precedent-making decision today, in which he held that divorce-seekers must prove a bona fide intention of residing in Nevada for an indefinite period of time.

Factor Describes Kidnaping Torture

barber's 19-year-old son, Jerome, victim of kidnapers three months ago.

The elder Factor has declared no ransom was paid for Jerome's release, but there have been persistent reports to the contrary. Mrs. Factor and another son, Alvin, 7 years old, also were in the suite.

Despite Factor's declaration that only $50,000 was paid, reports that the ransom was $200,000 persisted. Factor denied that the $50,000 was a "down payment" and that more would be paid later.

Asked if he would prosecute, Factor replied: "What can I do? I couldn't recognize them."

Two Seized in Luer Case.

Alton, Ill., July 13 (A.P.).—Two St. Louis men were held for questioning tonight concerning the abduction of August Luer, aged Alton banker, seized in his home Monday night.

The elder of the two men, a St. Louis hotel proprietor, was taken into custody there by 16 detectives and 2 Department of Justice agents, after he was declared to have telephoned Mayor Thomas Butler, of Alton, recommended $50,000 as a suitable ransom and suggested that police be called off the case.

His son also was taken to St. Louis police headquarters and later both were moved to Alton. After being interrogated here the men were taken to Edwardsville, Ill., and placed in the county jail. They will be questioned further tomorrow. No charges have been filed.

Albany, N. Y., July 13 (A.P.).—A week ago young Lieut. John J. O'Connell, jr., of the New York National Guard, was snatched from his family by kidnapers, and tonight his politically famous uncles had only hope to sustain a belief he would be returned.

"The kidnapers are doing what is the most logical thing from their point of view," said Daniel P. O'Connell, one of the two uncles who dominate Albany County Democracy.

"They're taking their time and when they feel certain there is no danger for themselves they will act. Meanwhile, the best we can do is keep the road clear for a contact and just hope."

Samuel E. Armowitz, law partner of Edward J. O'Connell, the other uncle, echoed this hopefulness. Said he:

"Things appear to be at a stalemate. All we can do is wait and hope. We've received no word from the kidnapers since Tuesday afternoon, but we believe there may be another communication before long."

The kidnapers, who disappeared with the 24-year-old youth early last Friday morning as he stepped from his automobile to enter the family home, demanded $250,000 ransom.

Frank P. Glass Named to Board Of Mediation

Roosevelt Also Nominates MacLean as Assistant Solicitor General.

The somnolent patronage machine got slowly under way yesterday as President Roosevelt appointed Frank P. Glass, Alabama publisher, to the Board of Mediation, and named Angus D. MacLean, of Washington, N. C., as Assistant Solicitor General.

Mr. Glass will fill the only vacancy on the board, which was established to arbitrate disputes between railways and their employes. He has been in the newspaper business since 1880, when he founded a weekly paper in Alabama. He is now publisher of the Montgomery Advertiser.

For two years, from 1923 to 1925, Mr. Glass was editorial director of the St. Louis Star. In 1913 he was appointed to the United States Senate to fill out the term of an Alabama senator who had died. By a majority of one the Senate refused to seat him, on the ground that Alabama law did not permit the governor to appoint him.

Mr. MacLean will be the first assistant solicitor general in the history of the Department of Justice. The office has just been created.

Mr. MacLean, who is 55 years old, has been practicing law in Washington, N. C. He has also served in the State Legislature and Senate, and has been recognized as a Senate leader. He is a cousin of former Gov. Angus MacLean of North Carolina.

The President made two other minor appointments yesterday. Gilbert Mecham was appointed United States Marshal for Utah, and George Meffran was named to a similar position in Idaho.

"New Deal" Is Not New, Economist Declares

Chicago, July 13 (A.P.).—There is nothing "new" about the administration's "new deal," Dr. David Friday, consulting economist of Washington, D. C., told the United States Independent Telephone Association today. "We are following the same cycle that has brought us out of other depressions," Dr. Friday said.

J. E. Crane, of Kansas City, and F. E. Bowen, of Fort Wayne, Ind., were elected directors. All officers were reelected.

Teachers May Ask Aid of First Lady

1,300 in Chicago Who Face Removal May Appeal to Miss Perkins Also.

Chicago, July 13 (A.P.).—A finish fight, with appeals planned to Secretary of Labor Perkins and Mrs. Roosevelt, was declared by unpaid school teachers tonight to prevent the Board of Education from removing about 1,300 teachers from pay rolls.

At the Principals Club teachers voted to institute legal action to protect what they termed violations of the teachers' tenure law.

Teachers under leadership of John Fewkes, marshal of previous protest parades against unpaid salaries, tomorrow will mass in a parade through the Loop to protest the Board of Education's action, which the teachers claim will wreck the schools.

G. O. P. in Arizona Indorse Democrat

Mrs. Greenway, Friend of Roosevelts, Urged for Douglas' Seat.

A special election has been called October 3 to name a successor to Representative Lewis W. Douglas, who resigned to become Federal director of the budget.

Fog Holds Up Lindbergh Hop For Labrador

Flying Colonel Foregoes Plan to See Balbo at Cartright.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, July 13 (A.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh announced today that he and Mrs. Lindbergh would not continue their aerial-mapping cruise to Labrador and Greenland until weather conditions improved.

He found cold, wet and foggy weather when he arose to inspect his red and black monoplane on Bay Bulls Big Pond, where it remained overnight while the colonel and his wife were guests of Col. L. C. Outerbridge.

The couple had prepared to push on today to Cartwright, Labrador, where it was thought possible they might meet the Italian armada of Gen. Italo Bablo en route to Chicago. The squadron, however, took off for Shediac, New Brunswick, after an overnight rest following a 1,500-mile hop from Reykjavik, Iceland.

The Lindberghs arrived yesterday afternoon about the time the Italian planes were alighting at Cartwright. They had made a flight of five and one-half hours from Halifax, N. S.

An enthusiastic reception was given the American couple as their plane was taxied to its mooring place in Bay Bulls Big Pond. Many of those in the large crowd which cheered them had sighted the colonel's plane as he flew over this province on his historic trip to Paris.

CHART SHOWING DISMISSED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES' HOPES OF RE-EMPLOYMENT IN THE GOVERNMENT.

WIDOWS of war veterans are availing themselves of preferential rating points now. In years past they, as a class, paid little attention to the extra credits and few laid claim to them. What was the need? Now they find them valuable . . . New agencies are building up their own libraries at the expense of older offices. Commerce library has suffered its share. And that reminds, five selected for the Delete in that library . . . And of libraries. Report first was that Office of Education, Interior, was closing its doors. Checkup shows this useful section is moving its books to the basement, while reading rooms will be maintained on second floor. . . . More about raids on libraries—a Who's Who volume costs $7.50. An associate of a Cabinet officer makes claim to use of that volume from a Government department library. And like all borrowed books, our best friends, the volume is still A. W. O. L.

There is a case in F. and D. C. The Federal Diary does not like the looks of it. It concerns a man of family. Skids have been ordered for him tomorrow. The industrial line he has been serving is about to be aroused over his deletion. You will hear more of his case if he fails to get decent treatment. We believe the same President who made the sweeping declaration of justice to discharged workers to be given preference in new places will order justice in the whole scheme of things as the worm-eaten inner facts are unfolded.

Government employe, one of many who have noticed it, comments: "I see The Washington Post is renovizing the exterior of its building."

Yes, the interior is being remade as well. We're getting a workshop we'll be proud of . . . "The 'Sleep Tight' cartoon was a clever depiction of fact," says Adam Goodman. "The Federal Diary is to be congratulated on so truly translating the feelings of Federal employes." Thanks, Mr. Goodman.

HERE'S a thought. Hugo B. Ledbetter says: "I fear for the future of those who are out. The 'will' to have a thing done, in print, is noble, but I fear it will collapse when it comes to administrative officials acting. What is

WHEN you call the Department of Agriculture sometime for a publication, you likely will hear answering the sprightly voice of a young lady. At once you will concede that it is the voice of one ready to serve—enthusiasm is so definite—and you will also feel that you have contacted with a real collaborator. This person—nine times out of ten—will be Miss Mary I. Parrett (*), efficient aid, Division of Publications.

The cheerful manner in which she accepts your telephonic request and acts upon it leaves with you a pleasant, lasting impression. You are convinced, at the close of the conversation, that you have discovered another one of Uncle Sam's capable employes.

that about never let the right hand know what the left hand doeth, or 'you can fool some of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all the people all of the time.' The mask will drop off ere long, maybe next November, or, rather, around October or September, when there is an election in process."

Of course, an election means little to those who seek votes, but we're putting the dates down in the old notebook.

Notice Ed Crockett, Agriculture, lost his horseshoe, cloverleaf stickpin, valued at $200. Ed, we hope that loss doesn't mean any more bad luck . . . Now we know why they recondition the air in Mr. Morgenthau's office. After all, some economy measures demand expense.

We heard a good one in Interior yesterday. If you'll watch closely down somewhere in the Federal Diary Monday you'll see it . . . Tomorrow they pat the National Committee on Wood Utilization in the face with a spade. Last-minute resuscitation hasn't resuscitated.

Greenhouses are greenhouses, even when painted gray.

Our friend, Joe Aranoff. We met him this week. He has a new connection. More soon.

There is a sign in the Navy Department Building. It reads, "Morale Rewarded." What a sign! Modifications in other departments are permissible with proper credit to the copyright owners.

G. W. Mooers, captain, Eagles bowling squad, Federal Trade League, has put on exhibit his team's trophy cup. It took some snappy playing to snag it.

The case of Capt. Evelyn Briggs Baldwin. Who's got the button? From the White House comes word his friends first should see Secretary Swanson. The Navy has washed its hands of the case. The Civil Service Commission can't do anything about it. But if the White House recommends Capt. Baldwin be appointed to a place of usefulness the rest will be easy. What a buck! What a pass!

Miss Emily F. Long, M. and S., Navy, is in West Point, N. Y., guest of her nephew, Lieut. William Leaf. Back next week.

Eddie Pritcher, formerly Files Section, Commerce, is "new dealing" in the Three A's . . . The Federal Diary is inventing a game, "The New Deal." Directions will be given gladly but verbally only. Rules are very brief.

Mrs. McCarty, mother of Miss Helen McCarty, Statistical, M. and S., Navy, has gone to New England for the summer. Perhaps it is well that it is "Mrs." and not "Miss." Otherwise a certain young man would need aromatic spirits of something.

Mark G. Horn, Statistics, Navigation, Navy, too busy for a vacation, over the week-end drove his mother to his old home in Tower City, Pa., where he left her and returned to duty again.

Miss Florence A. Belt(*) Navigation, Navy, has returned from a visit with relatives in Michigan. She had planned to stop at Chicago's fair but found time too short for both. She reports a wonderful time and "only a few tire blowouts." It takes a good disposition to refer to them that way.

Miss Dorothy Allen, formerly with Inter-American High Commission, is helping Recovery Board recover.

TAKING inventory, the Federal Diary has looked for the joker, if any, in the announced plan to give dismissed Federal workers preference in the new agencies. Frankly, we can't find it. With Secretaries Roper and Ickes in line and Jim Farley announcing he's for what the President wants, we must take the announcement at its face value. However, the Federal Diary intends to watch the situation for any defects in execution of the announced plan to put these employes on the job.

On the face of the situation, administrative heads who ignore what the cabinet council has expressed as its policy in restoring work to those on the delete list will be openly defying the President's instructions.

In resume of the crusade on behalf of ousted workers, let us bear in mind the part the N. F. F. E., through its weekly, the Federal News, has played in presenting the situation. L. C. McNemar, Navy Department, associate editor, and Luther Stewart, national president, took a definite stand for these people. The Federal Diary already has recognized the part the A. F. of L. and A. F. G. E. have played in shaping review of the situation for presentation to the President.

The Three A's has shown a preference toward dismissed Civil Service employes. The sooner other new agencies line up the sooner we will know they realize the full import of the President's wishes.

FISHERMEN in celluloid!

Don't envy the movie actors. Be one yourself!

All who go on the Federal Diary-I. W. L. A.-Outdoorsmen First Annual Salt Water Rodeo, Tilghman, July 22-23, will be movie actors automatically.

Glen C. Leach, chief fish culturist, United States Bureau of Fisheries, says he considers the rodeo an event worth recording in celluloid. So he will bring along his movie machine and when you hear, "Camera," you'll know that's the time to haul in your biggest fish. And may there be mercy on any fish hogs in the vicinity, for the camera will be ready to record that phase, too.

But the Federal Diary is confident that only thoroughgoing sportsmen will be on this party. It is so confident that it will wager that there will be no fish hogs present. We'll discuss fish hogs in the Outdoorsmen column soon.

Mr. Leach will expose perhaps 500 feet of film on the first fishing event of its kind ever held in Chesapeake Bay.

The 200 reservations are being taken rapidly. The all-expense cost is $5.50. We leave by W. B. & A. special train at 3 p. m., July 22, using Claiborne-Annapolis ferry for the fishing grounds. Prizes? Yes, prizes.

Ship Collision Inquiry Today Will Be Public

Officers and Crew of the City of Baltimore and Tanker Called.

Baltimore, July 13 (A.P.).—A public hearing before the board of Federal steamboat inspectors is to be held tomorrow to investigate the crash of the liner City of Baltimore and the oil tanker Beacon.

Officers and members of the two crews were summoned today to appear in the custom house to give testimony as the inspectors try to ascertain why the ships collided late yesterday in the Chesapeake Bay.

Passengers on the transatlantic liner will not be required to attend the hearing and late today they boarded a sister ship of the City of Baltimore, the City of Newport News, and once again started for Havre and Hamburg.

Their luggage was removed from the City of Baltimore after it limped into port here today, with a 60-foot hole ripped in its side and was placed on the City of Newport News. All passengers were taken from the liner by a ferry boat last night a short time after the collision.

The accident occurred in bright daylight 25 miles south of Baltimore after the City of Baltimore, flagship of the Baltimore Mail Line, headed out on its regular run to Europe.

The Beacon, owned by the Standard Shipping Co., was not as seriously damaged as the City of Baltimore and was able to proceed to Baltimore without aid and enter drydock. The City of Baltimore was grounded last night and today was pulled off by tugs and brought to port.

Owner Loses His House.

Salt Lake City, July 13 (A.P.).—A house owned by Daniel E. Davis is mysteriously missing from its foundation. Davis told the sheriff that the building had been hauled away.

G. R. Porter Rites To Be Held Today

Life-Long Resident Here Will Be Laid to Rest in Glenwood.

Funeral services for George R. Porter, life-long resident of Washington, will be held from the home, 2505 Rhode Island avenue, today at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Born in Alexandria, Va., 73 years ago, Mr. Porter came to Washington when he was an infant. An employe at the Census Bureau for several years, he later worked in a local department store. After 27 years at Woodward & Lothrop, he was retired as manager of the first floor in 1928 because of ill health.

He was an active member of the 20-Year Club, members of which will serve as pallbearers. In this club he organized the Woodlothian Chorus. He also was a member of La Fayette Lodge, F. A. A. M.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Orender M. Porter; George B., a son, and Mrs. James La Coste Rodier, a sister, both of Washington.

Mrs. J. R. Shroy Dead in Fairfax

The annual Forestville Day celebration, which was to have been held tomorrow at the Great Falls Grange Hall in Forestville, Va., has been indefinitely postponed owing to the death of Mrs. J. R. Shroy, prominent resident of that section of Fairfax County.

Mrs. Shroy was one of the group working in the Grange hall Wednesday night preparing for the celebration. She suffered a stroke of paralysis and died at 2 a. m. yesterday at her home. She was born 59 years ago in Loudoun County, Va., but had lived in Fairfax County for the past 18 years. She is survived by her husband, J. R. Shroy; a daughter, Mrs. Russell Bailey, of Washington, and a son, Henry Shroy, of Forestville.

Funeral services will be held Sunday morning at 11 o'clock at her late residence, with interment in the Chestnut Grove Cemetery at Herndon.

Cannon's Trial Is Scheduled For October

Hearing Decision Follows Receipt of Mandate From High Court.

Barring unforseen delay, Bishop James Cannon, jr., and his aid, Miss Ada L. Burroughs, who were indicted for alleged violation of the corrupt practices act in that they failed to report contributions received by the Virginia Anti-Smith committee during the 1928 Presidential campaign, will be tried in the District Supreme Court in October, Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson said yesterday.

The action was taken closely on the heels of the receipt by the court of a mandate from the District Court of Appeals, which reversed a previous ruling of the District Supreme Court that had held the indictment against the militant bishop and Miss Burroughs invalid.

The charge against the pair is that contributions received from E. C. Jameson, New York capitalist, were not reported to the House of Representatives in the proper manner.

Bishop Cannon attacked the indictment because it did not charge him with "knowledge" of the receipt by his committee of the money. His fight was successful and the indictment was held invalid, only to be held valid by the higher courts. Attorneys for both declared they planned an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Mrs. Borland's Rites Will Be Held Today

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. today at Hysong's funeral home for Mrs. Anna Jane Borland, who died Wednesday at her home, 1835 K street northwest.

Mrs. Borland, who has spent her summers in Washington, is survived by a sister in Cleveland, Ohio.

Universal to Make a Sequel to "Frankenstein"

Karloff Signed To Appear in a Weird Shocker

Miss Carroll to Do a Kate Smith; Complete Cast of New Musical; Gossip.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"The monster" will stalk the dark passageways and village streets of Britain once again!

To those whose enjoyment of the screen is in direct ratio to the acreage of gooseflesh it is able to create, it will come as a glad announcement that Boris Karloff, leading claimant to the crown of the late Lon Chaney, who won stardom by his uncanny performances as the man-made monster of "Frankenstein" nearly two years ago, has signed a new contract with Universal Pictures Corp., and will be starred next in "The Return of Frankenstein."

The outstanding delineator of grotesque, weird and eerie figures upon the screen, Karloff returned to Hollywood a month ago after several months in England devoting his bizarre talents to a merry little conceit called "The Ghoul," and his appearance in "The Return of Frankenstein" will be his first on the American screen in approximately eight months.

Decision to make a sequel to the blood-chilling and unforgettable "Frankenstein," with Karloff playing the role of the man created by science, was made after Tom Reed, Universal scenarist, found the inspiration for the new story, with even greater thrill possibilities than the original, in a certain chapter of the Mary Shelley novel written nearly 100 years ago.

Reed not only wrote the original screen play but also the continuity and dialogue for "The Return of Frankenstein" and, if present plans are successfully consummated, Colin Clive, now back in London after three trips to Hollywood, will cross the Atlantic again to appear as Frankenstein, the scientist, the role he created for the cameras and microphones.

Whether Mae Clarke and John Boles will be reengaged to play the roles they assumed in the original production has not as yet been made known by Carl Laemmle, jr., to whom the thrill-seekers will be indebted for this new adventure in chills-and-fever drama.

A staunch adherent of that grotesque fetish of the theater that "the show must go on" regardless of hell, high water, taxes and indigestion, Phil Lampkin, the fork-handed baton swisher at Loew's Fox, for the past week has been presiding over the boys in the orchestra trench the victim of what he describes optimistically as a mild complication of chronic appendicitis, leprosy, bubonic plague and the croup.

If you were present on one of the occasions when the young maestro's trumpet solo in the overture was omitted, you now know the reason why.

Washington's own Kate Smith is to have a successor as a radio star on the silver sheet. That is to say, an impersonation of a radio star on the s. s.

Although the announcement makes no mention of any conscious or subconscious influence "Hello, Everybody" may have had upon the executive mind, Columbia Pictures this week engaged Nancy Carroll for the coveted role of leading woman in "Goin' to Town," the story of the rise and fall of a radio crooner, after having had a number of prominent stars under consideration for the past fortnight.

Miss Carroll has a background of many years on the Broadway musical comedy stage before launching her motion picture career. So had Kate.

Victor Schertzinger, whose last effort on view locally was "The Constant Woman," will direct "Goin' to Town" and also will compose a group of songs to be interwoven with the dramatic action.

Carols for the Carroll, as you might say.

And to punctuate a noisy and hectic afternoon of carpenters, floor polishers, sand-blasters and partition wreckers, came Roland Robbins a-calling, after all this time! Mr. Robbins, for 13 years the burgeoning and beatific manager of the old B. F. Keith Theater, since you ask, looks fit as a fiddle and precisely as if the curtain had just gone up on the first act!

It is worth keeping in mind—especially since announcement has been made that "42d Street" will follow the Mae West engagement at the Metropolitan Theater—that the Warner Brothers next musical film, "Footlight Parade," is now "shooting" at the Burbank studios with Lloyd Bacon directing, and Busby Berkeley in charge of the singing and dancing ensembles.

The screen play is by Manuel Seff, coauthor with Robert Forrest Wilson—"Bob," to you, if you go back to his Washington newspaper days—of "Blessed Event," and James Seymour, while the musical numbers were composed by Walter Donaldson with lyrics by Gus Kahn.

Chester Kent, James Cagney; Nan, Joan Blondell; Bea, Ruby Keeler; Scotty, Stanley Smith; Bowers, Hugh Herbert; Francis, Frank McHugh; Frazer, Arthur Hohl; Thompson, Gordon Westcott; Vivian, Claire Dodd; Mrs. Gould, Dorothy Tennant; Cynthia, Renee Whitney; Miss Smythe, Juliette Ware; Fralick, Herman Bing; Apollinaris, Paul Porcasi; Gould, Guy Kibbee; Doorman, William Granger; Cop, Charles Wilson; Joe Grant, Philip Faversham.

The role of "Scotty" was originally assigned to Dick Powell and was to have decided the matter of his more or less permanent costellar partnership with Ruby Keeler. A severe attack of pneumonia, however, settled that matter, for the time being, and gave Stanley Smith the opportunity of a lifetime.

As we have remarked before, that's show business!

It is a little early for Mr. Stephen Erlanger Cochran of the National, but it won't be long now until new season announcements will be forthcoming from the typewriters of Rodney Collier, manager of the temporarily "at rest" Rialto Theater, and Jimmie Lake, Chesterfieldian custodian of the destinies of the Gayety, Washington's only temple of burlesque and stronghold of cutaneous display. August should knock off the padlocks and swing the doors wide.

And there is a note of hope, too, in the spectacle of L. Stoddard Taylor, for more than a quarter of a century the theater's punctilious manager, sitting nightly in the breezy portals of his tabernacle of Thespis, the Shubert-Belasco, as if momentarily awaiting word that the house lights are to go up and the show go on.

If all this should come to pass at once, wouldn't that be sumpin'!

The tip may not be lacking in timeliness that, beginning today, the short subjects in our downtown, first-run cinemagogues will closely rival, if not in some instances actually surpass, the so-called major features. Length is not necessarily a prerequisite of excellence. And don't say I didn't tell you.

Having been denied the pleasure opening night by an habitual Wednesday night jam of official duties, I have just come, as this is written, from the second and—for the present, at least—last performance of Mr. Edward de S. Melcher's three-act comedy, "Little White Mice," presented by the Pierce Hall Players in their auditorium at Fifteenth and Harvard streets, and hasten to add my congratulations to the chorus of critical acclaim with which my afternoon confrere's clever play has been greeted.

"Little White Mice" may stand in need of a little tightening in its first two acts, a bit more motivation and a little expansion of its central character, but in the large view it is, as it stands, a shrewdly contrived, thoughtfully written and well worked out comedy, with a third act that comes as a complete surprise and, to these eyes, not at all as an anachronism or burial ground for the author's pungently satirical theme.

There is, at present, a tendency to give acts one and two something of the allegorical flavor of "The Pass of the Third Floor Back," "Mister Antonio," "Pigeons and People," and others of the plays that have characters of purely symbolic significance for their central figures, but this delusion is amusingly and heartily dispelled by the very human quality of the last act and its workmanlike clarifying of the play's purpose. "Little White Mice" is a first play of fine promise.

In addition to Mr. Melcher, who carried the burden of his own play in large measure, I particularly enjoyed the performance of Maud Howell Smith, Rose Ellen Mattern, in the ingenue role opposite Mr. Melcher; Olga Helms, Fritz Firey and William Rodon, last evening. They played with excellent timing and effect.

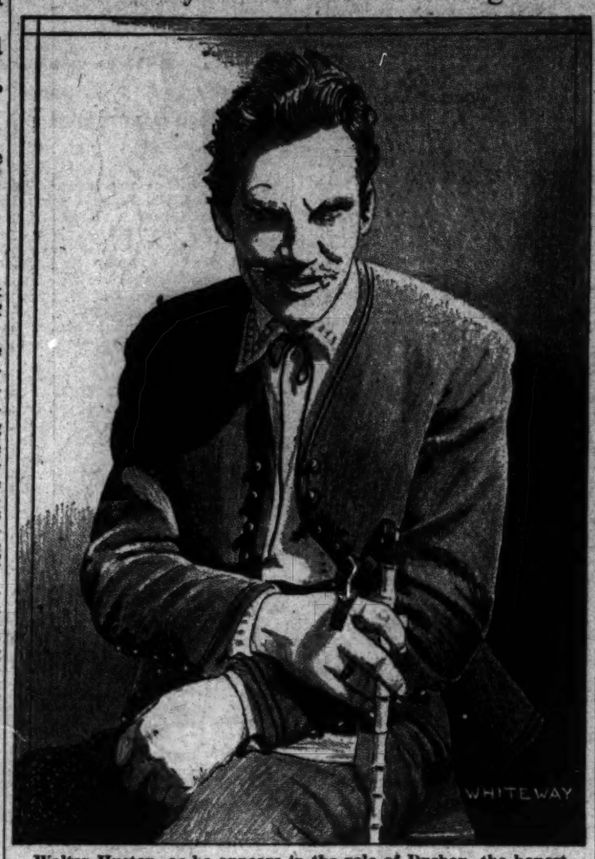
The title of an old favorite stage piece that was popular 'way back when Mr. Melcher was a mere kid seems about to express it:

"Very good, Eddie!"

Probably the most eloquent testimony to the excellence of "Little White Mice" is to be found in the fact that nobody has seen fit to smart-crack about a "piece of cheese" in connection with it!

Yes, they are—perfectly elegant nights for sleeping!

Probably It Serbed Him Right!



Walter Huston, as he appears in the role of Dushan, the honest Serbian horse breeder and village mayor, in "Storm at Daybreak," opening today at Loew's Palace. This is one of this sterling actor's most colorful parts, although his is the losing point of a triangular love that includes Irina, his wife, and Geza, the Hungarian Hussar. That is the kind of a geezer Geza was!

5,500 Attend Marine Band's Concert on Mall

Wagner, Strauss and Liszt Are Payed; Mrs. McGuffey Sings.

A splendid program well played marked the fifth summer musical festival under the auspices of the Community Center department and sponsored by the Greater National Capital committee of the Washington Board of Trade last night at the Sylvan Theater. The United States Marine Band, under the leadership of Capt. Taylor Branson, played, with Anne Yago McGuffey, contralto, as guest artist.

More than 5,500 thronged the grassy slopes of the Monument Grounds to listen to the unamplified concert that opened with "Les Preludes," of Liszt. Mrs. McGuffey's two solos were the arias "Figlio Mio," from Meyerbeer's Opera, "The Prophet" and "The Song That Reached My Heart." As encores, Mrs. McGuffey rendered "I Passed by Your Window" (Brahe), "L'Amour, Toujours l'Amour" (Friml), and Little Buttercup's salutatory, from "H. M. S. Pinafore" (Sullivan).

The high spot of the band's offering came with the rendition of the prelude to act three of Wagner's "Lohengrin" and "The Ride of the Valkyries," from "Die Walkeure."

Other band numbers included the tone poem "Till Eulenspiegel" (Strauss), grand scenes from Puccini's "La Tosca," the "Ritual Fire Dance," from "Love, the Magician" (De Falla), and Tschaikowsky's "1812 Overture."

Playing his own "Fantasie Capriccioso," Cornetist Winfred Kemp was the first instrumental soloist and was followed later by Musician Kenneth Douse, playing Wiedoeft's "Valse Erica" as a saxophone solo.

The band gave as encores, four marches, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" (Herbert), by Musician Kemp, and "The Night When Love Was Born," by Musician Douse.

Although the band lacked some of its usual fire, the encores more than made up for it. For the Marine Band has gone choral! Capt. Branson and the first oboe enjoyed a good time joining their mates in furnishing the vocal choruses for the saxophone encores and especially in "Let's Sing as the Birdies Sing," the final spasm of musicalized nonsense.

Next Wednesday evening the Community Center Department will present the Lester Shafer-Marian Chase Dance Group and the United States Army Band in a joint concert at the Sylvan Theater.

The Public Works Program.

The first list of Federal construction projects, calling for an estimated expenditure of $66,000,000, has been approved by President Roosevelt. More than $40,000,000 of this first allotment will go to Boulder Dam and similar works, and most of the balance will be devoted to projects under the Department of Agriculture. A schedule of road works in national parks, national forests and Indian reservations, aggregating $50,000,000, has also been approved. The next schedule under consideration is that which calls for about $500,000,000 for river and harbor improvements and War Department betterments.

The task of sifting out suitable enterprises to be financed from public works funds is now found to be very complicated. It is to be solved by referring all projects to regional administrations after they have passed through the hands of advisory committees in each State. By this means it is hoped that a fair deal will be given to all sections of the country in spending money to reduce unemployment.

Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, gives assurance that the $3,300,000,000 public works fund will not be squandered on enterprises which would call for large sums for maintenance. The actual need of proposed improvements will be insisted upon, and even then they will not be approved if local governing authorities do not bring ordinary expenditures within prudently estimated revenues.

In order to put men at work as speedily as possible, first attention is given to Federal projects. The War and Treasury departments have completed plans for river and harbor works and public buildings which can be begun without delay. Many of the improvements suggested by States and local bodies have not even reached the blueprint stage. The acquisition of lands and preparation of plans would consume much time.

Highway construction offers an opportunity for prompt employment of men in every section of the country. The naval construction program will provide work in hundreds of factories as well as shipyards. Construction improvements under the War, Agriculture, Treasury, and Navy departments are now seen to be much more quickly available than projects offered by States or municipalities. The Federal projects are not subject to political rivalry, as a rule, while nearly every State program of improvements dependent upon Federal financing contains projects which have been insisted upon by politicians, and which will be attacked in due time by rival politicians. The job of weeding out meritorious projects may greatly delay construction works of this character.

Restricting Sugar.

A determined fight for the American sugar market is underway. At present the struggle centers in Washington, where the sugar conference central committee has drawn up a schedule of tentative sugar production quotas for all groups that are interested in the American market. This does not mean that the domestic, insular and Cuban producers have reached an agreement, but that a concerted effort is being made to get the problem before the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The sugar industry has been demoralized by overproduction in recent years. Cuba finds almost no outlet for her sugar outside of the United States, because many European countries have developed sugar beet industries to supply their own needs. Cultivation of sugar in the Philippine Islands has undergone rapid growth under the stimulus of a free market in the United States. At the same time agricultural difficulties have driven many farmers in the United States to raising beets for domestic sugar refineries. Large supplies also come from Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

Intensive competition from many sources drove sugar prices to a low level. Some improvement has been made recently, but the committee meeting here concluded that unless immediate action is taken prices would again descend to the level of last year. The present effort is not to fix prices, but to limit the output from the various sources to the estimated demands of the American market.

Domestic consumption of sugar for the coming year is estimated at 6,350,000 tons. Under the plan tentatively approved by the central committee 1,835,000 tons would be allocated to domestic beet and cane sugar producers; 2,815,000 to all the insular areas having free access to the American market, and 1,700,000 tons to Cuba. Perhaps the most striking feature of this plan is the small allotment to Cuba. In 1931 Cuba exported to the United States 2,314,500 tons of sugar and in 1929 nearly twice that amount. It will be interesting to note what consideration officials will give to the welfare of Cuba if the quota system is finally adopted.

The sugar problem may be greatly changed in the next few years by a vote in favor of independence in the Philippine Islands. Under the independence act free sugar imports to the United States would be limited during the transition period and Philippine sugar would become subject to duty afterward. If the Filipinos reject the independence act, some restrictions on their sugar exports to this country may be necessary to save the domestic and Cuban industries from collapse.

Civil Service Postmasters.

President Roosevelt's move to place all postmasters under the classified civil service deserves commendation. It does not immediately remove postmasterships from the spoils system, but it is a step toward the elimination of politics in the choice of executives for Uncle Sam's great business organization.

At present fourth class postmasters are under civil service regulations. Postmasters of the first, second and third classes, numbering about 15,000, are appointed on the basis of political favoritism. Their number is not large compared with the 32,672 fourth class postmasters, but they have control over upwards of 60,000 jobs. Patronage distributed through the postal system at present reaches tremendous proportions.

President Roosevelt's executive order and his request for the preparation of legislation on this subject do not mean that postmasterships now vacant will be distributed on an impartial basis. When a vacancy occurs it may be refilled by reappointing the incumbent or by selecting some qualified person within the competitive classified civil service. But the Postmaster General does not need to follow this course. He may ask the Civil Service Commission to hold an examination and submit to him the names of three eligibles. Any one of the three might be appointed, or the Postmaster General might disqualify any of them and call for the names of other eligibles. Thus the way is left open for political influence.

It may be assumed that faithful Democrats will be rewarded with postmasterships under this temporary arrangement. Even so, it is an improvement over the method now in use for the selection of postmasters. Future appointments may be strictly partisan, but only qualified candidates may be selected. Heretofore postmasters appointed by the President have not been required to take competitive examinations. They have merely been rated by agents of the Post-office Department and the Civil Service Commission on the basis of interviews and general reputation. Political service as well as political affiliations has been a dominant influence in the final selection.

Apparently the President wishes to let Congress decide whether first, second and third class postmasterships should be put definitely under the classified service. He asked Mr. Farley to prepare legislation for that purpose for submission to Congress next January. Fourth class postmasters were brought under the merit system by an executive order of President Taft, and President Wilson extended civil service rules to all postmasters. Why could not President Roosevelt effect a similar reform by executive order? Immediate establishment of the merit system would, of course, be a great strain upon the hopes of patronage seekers, but it would also save the Government a considerable sum of money and would undoubtedly improve the postal service.

The Ten Leading Industries.

Which are the ten most important industries of the United States? Is the list to be made up from those having the greatest capital investment, those having the greatest number of employees on their pay roll, or those whose output is most valuable? Considered from the standpoint of the present plans for putting men back to work and increasing the purchasing power of the people, the industries having the largest working forces seem to be entitled to the rank of premier importance.

Gen. Johnson, administrator of the industrial recovery program, has been quoted as expressing the hope that the ten major industries which control the bulk of industrial employment would be able to file their codes without delay, but he does not name those which he considers key industries. The latest available Census Bureau figures giving the number of employees in general groups show the first ten as follows:

	Employees.
Textiles and products	1,409,000
Railroads, Class I.	1,032,000
Public utilities, including wire communication and motor busses	956,000
Construction and building	829,000
Food and kindred products	829,000
Mining and quarrying	806,000
Machinery manufacture	685,000
Iron and steel	598,000
Lumber and forest products	512,000
Land, water and air transportation equipment	375,000

In all there are 7,000 industries in the United States. Agriculture, of course, is the most important, with about 6,000,000 farmers. Every general industrial classification is divided and subdivided into many branches, each of which in many respects must be considered as a separate industry. The sixteen major groups are listed as foods, textiles, iron and steel, lumber, leather, rubber, paper and printing, chemicals, stone, clay and glass, metals other than iron, tobacco, machinery, transportation equipment, musical instruments, railroad repair shops, and miscellaneous.

Germany Reconsiders.

American holders of German dollar-bonds have scored a signal victory in their demand for revision of the drastic transfer moratorium proclaimed in Berlin on June 9. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, will undertake to meet both interest and sinking fund payments during the last half of 1933 against all dollar bonds save Dawes Loan and Young Plan issues. Investment houses which participated in the flotation of approximately $1,000,000,000 in German bonds upon the American market since 1923 have been advised formally of the new plan.

As originally proclaimed, the German transfer moratorium was intended to run for perhaps several years. The revision contemplates an end of the emergency measures at the end of six months. Meanwhile, all interest coupons on external obligations will be redeemed by 50 per cent payments in transferable exchange and the remainder in Reichsmark checks against the Berlin Conversion Bank. Dr. Schacht has pledged the active cooperation of the Reichsbank in maintaining a market for these checks.

Amortization schedules will be maintained wherever the operation may be accomplished by the surrender and cancellation of bonds. The German authorities express confidence in their ability to acquire, without undue strain upon German exchange, sufficient bonds to meet amortization needs until January 1, 1934.

Good news seldom catches up with bad. Announcement of the arbitrary German moratorium on June 9 was a shock to the entire world. But today's important modification of Berlin's attitude toward external bonds is heartening evidence that reason and a sturdy sense of honor are again beginning to find play in international relations.

A Valiant Couple.

Among the many notable feats in aviation claiming the attention of the world none will be followed with greater interest than the expedition of Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh to chart a route to Europe through the frozen wastes of the northern passage. It is a brave undertaking that might well daunt a larger party composed of the hardiest male fliers. Anne Lindbergh, however, is no novice at flying. The successful crossing of the North Pacific was eloquent testimony not only to the colonel's skill as a pilot, but to her efficient help, since she is an expert radio operator as well as navigator.

The tragedy which the Lindberghs suffered in the loss of their first-born might have ruined the entire lives of less dauntless spirits. But these stout-hearted parents have elected to take up again their useful share of the work of the world. It is a brave decision. They are well qualified for important contributions in their chosen field and their example, no less than the results they attain, will be applauded.

With the constant improvement that is being made in airplanes, both in stability and speed, and the additional safety and accuracy of flight attained by new scientific instruments, trans-oceanic flight becomes more and more practical. That regular mail and passenger service spanning both the Atlantic and Pacific will be accomplished before long can not be doubted.

The London conference steering committee proposes to run the craft into drydock on July 26, to repair a twisted rudder, scrape off barnacles, caulk up leaks, and patch up a mysterious torpedo-hole in the starboard bow.

Five cooks who threw glass into food have been sentenced to death in Moscow. Similar punishment for all who throw monkey-wrenches into the Washington new deal would decimate the population.

One reason why jobs are not handed out faster to the faithful is that the co-ordinators change their headquarters so often that Jim Farley can't locate them—and he's some locator.

It is said that 250 Democrats are ready to take any job that may be assigned to them by the President, including ambassadorships. Isn't the number 250,000?

"No political pressure will influence decisions," announces Secretary Ickes, distributor of the $3,300,000,000 public works fund. What was that election for?

Stratosphere Flying.

From the Literary Digest.

Glorious as it is to fly high and to ascend swiftly, does not the performance of such feats involve grave risk to the health of the pilot, if not to the passengers?

No, reply Doctors Garsaux and Strohl in the Revue Aeronautique Internationale (Paris), cited by Emile Severac in Liberte (Paris).

The doctors made many experiments to test the matter, both being experts in the therapy of aviation cases. M. Severac, himself a student of aviation, concludes:

"We still await the real era of navigation through the stratosphere.

"It is now clear that we shall have to wait much longer than we expected at first for the period to arrive when we shall navigate the stratosphere at our ease.

"It is not so much a question of the 'ceiling' as of the apparatus whereby ascensional speeds may be attained properly. There are in existence even now many sorts of aerial contrivances which can rise thousands of feet into the air in less than 30 minutes.

"This is the consequence of the constant improvements in motors, the steady approach to perfection of compressors and of technical adjuncts and of the increasing efficiency of pilots.

"But the pilot himself? In case of necessity, with a supply of oxygen duly calculated, a man could live for a long time in a rarefied air zone without subsequent ill effects. The difficulty is presented by the problem of ascent and descent."

Tests of the strictest sort, paralleling flights at high altitudes so far as rarefied air and air-pressures are concerned, were undertaken upon themselves by Doctors Garsaux and Strohl.

They made experiments upon animals likewise.

Here is what the doctors infer:

"At present the ascensional speeds of flying machines are not sufficient to cause either pilot or passenger any important complication.

"Certain difficulties have occurred.

"They were due to fatigue already present or to sinus trouble or ear defects existing beforehand."

The attempt to discuss tin at the London conference doubtless will be thwarted by the American colloquial meaning.

Some economic delegates have intimated, off the record, that Uncle Sam should demonstrate his ability to control overproduction of crops and racketeers before advising the world on other forms of inflation.

There seems no longer any danger that the London parley will break up; it is simply disintegrating.

If through the combined effects of destroying 10,000,000 acres of cotton, lower production costs, higher prices and the processing tax planters aren't made happy, we'll think up something else.

"U. S. to bid for Latin-American trade." We trust there will be no offense over Chinese and Russian precedence.

American delegates in London are displaying great dexterity in keeping the conference alive in a general way while killing off specific discussion.

A blanket order covering minimum wages and maximum hours would surely be effective in sweating out the reluctant codifiers.

We have no saber rattling over here, but in view of improving conditions, an occasional shake of the permissive instruments the President has in the bag may suffice to avoid their use.

The bakers are warned that they had better not go too far in extending the love of shortnin' bread.

Bootleggers apparently transfer readily to kidnaping, utilizing established equipment by simply reversing their underground railway.

"Salter holds conference is in grave danger." The way some delegates are burning up, cremation seems more threatening.

Those who think the Tuesday council too large shouldn't object to the President banking on a super-Cabinet that just equals the 20 Morgan partners.

Various code delays are due to the fact that some of the questionnaires are still blank and others filled with blankety-blanks.

VACATION.

Out in the open air I stroll,
Alone with my beleagured soul,
And seek to find through walls of grime
And the oppressive tasks of time
A gateway out of which to go
To beauties mortals ache to know.

Beyond the petty things of life,
The bickerings of selfish strife,
I long to pause awhile to rest
And give myself to what is best;
To set my prisoned spirit free
From all that halts and hinders me.

Moonlight and stars and silvered lake
Lure me old hatreds to forsake;
To seek some crevice through the line
Which hems this battered soul of mine
And slip away, as if on wings,
From Time's confused and trivial things.

The soul of me would break away
From all that holds it fast by day
To dream and fancy and to share
An hour unstained by selfish care,
A prisoner, escaped and free,
Though soon I shall recaptured be.

To Match the Giant's Sword, the Little Man Must Use a Sling and Stone

By Robert Quillen

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, who no longer says many things worth quoting, made one wise observation during his recent visit to America.

He condemned the motion-picture standard of behavior which advocates a "sock on the jaw" as the solution of all personal problems. To give a sock on the jaw instead of calling a policeman, said he, is a procedure both unlawful and uncivilized.

The evil, however, is not in the sock but in the sequel.

The right to the jaw is an American institution. In early days, when perfumed dandies fought with sword and pistol, the unwashed settled their quarrels with their fists.

It wasn't a matter of sportsmanship, but of necessity. Wanting machinery to do their work, men glorified muscle. In fighting they used the only tools their poverty afforded. And as always they made a virtue of necessity and established the doctrine that fists alone are proper and decent weapons for personal combat.

Now the typical American father encourages his son to learn the "manly art of self-defense" and feels disgraced if junior will not use his fists against a tyrant.

An unwritten law requires men in military service and in labor camps to settle their differences by Queensberry rules and shake hands when the business is finished.

In our literature and our drama the hero endures injustices until he can endure no more, and at last, to our infinite delight, rocks the villian to sleep with a right to the button.

So far, so good.

But careless Nature frequently builds a large man without equipping him with a soul and heart to match. It isn't always the hero who has a lethal punch.

When two men quarrel, the larger and stronger one, feeling as safe as a parent assaulting a child, decides to close the argument by socking the smaller one on the jaw.

The smaller one, if he remains conscious, must then make choice of two unpleasant reactions. If he is timid or discreet or unmindful of jeers, he may "take it"—accept defeat as inevitable for one of his size and resign himself to fate.

But if he has pride or a bold spirit or a strong aversion to injustice, he makes the other choice. He uses a gun or a knife to balance the other man's superior weight and muscle. And the jury then decides whether it is justifiable homicide or murder.

The sock-on-the-jaw practice appeals only to the man who can resort to it without danger of getting hurt.

To encourage it as a means of ending discussions is to make small men subservient to big ones or justify the use of a gun by one who can't "sock."

Political Comment

Baltimore Sun.

The injection of the bonus and pension issue into contests for the Legislature in Kentucky is a significant indication that the President's pension policies are in for strong attack from many angles. State Legislatures have nothing to do with Federal pensions, and the fact that candidates for such a body are being heckled may be taken as fair warning that pension raiders are not going to let the grass grow under their feet.

This means that the issue is likely to become an outstanding one in the Congressional elections next year, the more so because in the Democratic landslide last November many strong Republican districts were carried by Democrats who may be hard put to it to hold their seats. In the circumstances the soldier vote may have powerful influence, and the urge to placate it will be hard to resist.

Caution Still in Security Buying.

Kansas City Times.

Under the new Federal securities law now becoming effective, the buyer will need to beware in the purchase of stocks and bonds as heretofore. The difference is that, if the buyer is properly alert, he will have more protection and recourse than before. He will assume the usual risks as to future depreciation of what he buys. There will be no government guarantee or any other sort of guarantee against that.

The buyer's protection will come chiefly through the information he may have about what he buys and through the opportunity he will have to bring suit against the seller of securities in case the latter has misrepresented his offering.

Clean Out Gangsters.

Houston Post.

The country's patience with gangsters is exhausted. It is thoroughly sick of them. That is manifested by the expression of approval from all parts of the Nation of the campaign being launched by Attorney General Cummings to clean out the racketeers and organized criminals. The popular demand for action by the Federal government should indicate to State law enforcement authorities that they would be doing a thing pleasing to the people if they would show more energy in going after criminals and in suppressing the rackets.

Spoiling the Library.

New York Herald Tribune.

It is hard to believe any one could be so perverted as to wish to apply the impious doctrine of political spoils to the Library of Congress. However, Dr. Herbert Putnam, one of the world's eminent librarians, and his staff, of some 800-odd have, it is said, been listed as possible victims of the patronage ax. President Roosevelt, we are sure, would never sanction such a raid. Nor do we think the suggestion originated with Postmaster General Farley, although as chairman of the Democratic National Committee he must find places for thousands of the "deserving" in his party.

Certainly, few members of Congress at all familiar with the excellence of the administration of the institution would harbor any idea of its degenerating into an asylum for job seekers.

Letters to the Editor.

Quebec Leads in Abolishing Countryside Billboards—An Eyesore to Travelers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Province of Quebec has enacted an antibillboard law which is effective on all of its 15,650 miles of improved roads. In the United States there are restrictive laws in effect in many cities and States that forbid the erection of advertising signs in places where natural beauty might be marred or where the signs might endanger the lives of motorists. But Quebec has taken the bull by the horns by not allowing any billboards to be erected, and those that are up must be torn down.

Billboards along scenic highways are an eyesore to the motorist. They are particularly numerous in this country. Would it not be a good idea to eliminate entirely this form of advertising in the United States?

Nature Curtails Wheat and Raises Price, but What Raised Price of Crude Oil?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Wheat and cotton have shown a considerable rise in price lately. The rise was brought about chiefly through nature causing a curtailment in the overproduction of these commodities. Secretary Wallace's plan of curtailing the acreage of cotton and wheat may have helped to bring about the rise in price. What I can not get through my cranium is what made crude oil advance from 25 cents to 85 cents a barrel in two weeks and then to advance an additional 33 cents in 24 hours? Oil was worth 25 cents a barrel on June 15, and by July 6 it has risen to 85 cents.

Crab Meat Ban Asked as Help To Maryland

D. A. R. Resolution Urges Excluding Products of Foreign Nations.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 8706 Georgia Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Pointing out that crabbing is one of the principal industries of Maryland, the Janet Montgomery Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has adopted a resolution asking that Japanses and Russian crab meat be barred from Maryland stores.

The resolution is to be sent to other chapters of the Daughters in Maryland and to State officials. It declares that local enterprises should be protected and foreign products prohibited. The resolution was adopted at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. Hewitt G. Robertson, Bethesda.

The chapter voted to pay its Tercentary obligation of $60 and to add a gift of $10 and to donate $10 to the Constitution Hall fund as a birthday gift to Mrs. Russell W. Magna, president-general.

Mrs. John G. Thompson was reelected president at the annual meeting of the Montgomery County Women's Christian Temperance Union Wednesday at Colesville. Mrs. Rebecca T. Miller was elected vice president.

Other officers elected: Mrs. John Hamilton, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary Magruder, recording secretary, and Mrs. Grace Sherman, treasurer.

Addresses were given by E. B. Dunford, attorney for the Anti-saloon League; the Rev. M. B. Sapp; G. H. Lonken, Mrs. G. W. Ashworth, Mrs. J. W. Nicholson and Mrs. F. M. Eaton.

The young people of Colesville presented a play, "Preventorium." A resolution urging a campaign for promotion of voluntary abstinence was adopted.

Departmental work was reported by the superintendents as follows: Mrs. S. E. Kelly, Sabbath observance; Mrs. J. J. Hutton, Sunday schools; Miss Margaret Bond, kindergarten; Miss Elizabeth Stabler, publications and literature; Mrs. Melvin E. Commission Approves Park Jobs for 25 Men

Continuation of work for 25 men at clearing underbrush, constructing parking places and on other improvement projects in the county park system was approved yesterday by the Maryland National Park and Planning Commission.

The men to be employed will be those certified by the unemployment relief committee of the Social Service League as in need of work to support families. The commission does not hire the men, but uses only those sent by the league officials.

Continue Beer Case.

The case of Charles Wilson, 44, of Richmond, arraigned in Alexandria Police Court yesterday on a charge of transporting 200 cases of beer, was continued until today. Wilson, it is understood, alleges the beer is consigned to a concern in Richmond which sells to drug stores for resale on physicians' prescriptions, and that its entry into Virginia is legal.

Not Holdup

Alleged Silk Stocking Robber Wins Release in Maryland.

On the grounds that evidence failed to bear out the true meaning of the charge, Judge J. Chew Sheriff in the Capitol Heights, Md., police court, yesterday released Robert Carr, jr., from a charge of attempting a holdup.

Carr, a resident of Capitol Heights, was arrested after he is alleged to have attempted a masked holdup at a drink parlor, July 6.

According to witnesses, the man entered the rear door of the establishment with a silk stocking over his face. Sticking a toy pistol into the side of Charles Railey, an employe, he is said to have demanded "a drink." Railey, undisturbed, grabbed the mask from Carr's face. He fled, but was later arrested by Constable Elvin Campbell.

Leaders Seek Democrat for Allen Vacancy

Fairfax Committee Meets Tomorrow to Discuss Candidates.

The dilemma of the regular Democrats of Fairfax County, Va., brought about by the unexpected death of Delegate Edmund H. Allen Tuesday, will be discussed tomorrow night by the county executive committee of the party at a meeting in the Fairfax Courthouse.

Leaders have been at a loss as to what action to take to secure the nomination of a regular Democrat for the vacancy in the party primary on August 1. They are believed to be in hopes that someone will be selected other than L. C. Painter, of Hybla Valley, whose name was the only other one on the primary ticket besides Allen's and who is declared not acceptable to the party leaders.

An opinion of Assistant Attorney General of Virginia Edwin B. Gibson that names for whom the voter wishes to cast his ballot can be written on the ballot may be the solution. The opinion was obtained by Charles Pickett, Fairfax attorney, who went to Richmond Wednesday afternoon to confer with State officials.

If this plan is followed, county chieftains expect to place active workers in each of the precincts to urge voters to cast their ballot and assure the nomination of the person selected by the leaders. It also is planned to have his name widely circulated before the primary. The man supported for the nomination also will be supported in a special election to fill the unexpired term of Delegate Allen, such an election being made necessary by the special session of the General Assembly beginning August 17.

The sentiment of the voters yesterday appeared strongly in favor of John C. Mackall, of Langley, becoming a candidate. This is in line with the desire expressed by Allen on numerous occasions that Mackall succeed him in the House of Delegates.

Water Famine In Arlington Is Called Unlikely

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST. Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Arlington County is in little danger of a water shortage, it was announced yesterday by County Manager Roy S. Braden.

The county manager, with County Engineer C. L. Kinnier, met yesterday with engineers from the office of Maj. J. D. Arthur, jr., district engineer, regarding the county's water supply lines at Chain Bridge, and issued the following statement:

"A very satisfactory conference was held and estimates of cost of a new line across the Potomac River at Chain Bridge were discussed.

"It was thought by the engineers of the District office that certain minor changes should be made at the bridge by putting in heavier fittings to make the safety factor greater, and it is expected this will be done in the very near future. These changes would replace the lighter construction where flanges were broken during June. The expense would be small and it would mean much greater protection.

"The matter of constructing the new line across the river is still being considered, but with the minor changes referred to being made this would give greater protection than has heretofore existed. It is the belief of county officials that there is no immediate danger of a water shortage, and even though the ordinary maintenance may be necessary because of breakage this would not seriously impair the water supply.

"Further conferences will be held and the engineers of the Federal water supply and the county officials are cooperating to the fullest extent to safeguard the interests of the people of Arlington County."

New Yorker Day by Day

By Mark Barron.

New York. — Balancing on one arm a fetching blonde lass who couldn't quite comprehend why a prize fight ring is referred to as a squared circle, a certain columnist attended the Carnera-Sharkey fight.

When the Italian giant unleashed that right uppercut which bounced the crown from Sharkey's to his own brow, the pretty uttered a gasp of amazement.

"My boy friend hit me like that once," she whispered.

"So he socked you with gusto?" commented the scribbler.

"He did not," the artless angel protested. "He hit me with his fist."

She Digs.

In the West Fifty-fourth Street Night Court there appeared a young pretty-about-town charged with having relieved her guillible escort of his bankroll.

"Isn't it true," demanded the prosecutor, "that on the last night you saw this man he carried $500 in cash?"

"No man ever carried that much the last night he was with me," retorted the girl, dropping a charming curtsy.

That's a never ending dizzy show, that night court. A young fellow was brought in on complaint of a corner apple seller that he had taken one of the apples, eaten it and then refused to pay.

"He didn't say anything about paying for it," defended the culprit. "I was passing and he said, 'Would you like a nice apple?' and I said I would and took one. He didn't say a word about buying it."

Which left the magistrate considerably nonplussed until the fellow promised to pay for the contested fruit. Case dismissed.

Gigolo Trade Improves.

The gigolo market is springing up again as some of the Park avenue dowagers have been replenishing their spare change accounts with profits from the recent rise in the stock market.

A portly, aging matron, with all the grace of an East River tugboat, came into a tea party in Sutton Place the other afternoon with one of these sleek, so-much-per-hour escorts dangling along.

Hurrying away, the matron, absent mindedly, started to depart alone.

"Wait a minute, darling," entreated the hostess, as she reclaimed the gigoloish young man for her guest. "You've forgotten your corsage."

Brooke Johns Gives Program For Arts Club

Other Musicians Also Are Featured in Offering at Garden.

Arts Club members last night gathered in the club garden for a program offered by Brooke Johns, local maestro of syncopation.

Mr. Johns, besides being master of ceremonies, climaxed the program with banjo numbers, "Some Sunday Morning," "Rolling Down the River" and others. He was accompanied by Miss Evalyn Tyner.

Theodore Tiller, jr., who is proving a genius for burlesque, accompanied by Romaine Stephens, offered his own interpretation of the Floradora sextet. Gretchen Hood, the Dixie Trio, Estelle Hunt Dean, the Duff Saxophone quartet, the Arts Club Players and the Capitol Hill Billies completed the program.

Members of the club enjoyed the program and expressed themselves as wanting more. The outdoor setting enabled apartment house dwellers next door to get a clear view of the proceedings from their windows.

Harold N. March was in charge of the meeting program and presented Dr. Joseph Quincy Adams, director of research of the Folger Shakespeare Library, who made the principal address, dwelling chiefly upon the life of Henry Folger, donor of the library.

North Carolina Fire Fighters Enter Parade

Details for Labor Day Event to Be Arranged Next Week.

The second official entry in the National Firemen's eleventh annual Labor Day parade is the fire company of Graham, N. C.

Sergt. A. J. Bargagni, parade marshal, received word late yesterday from the chief of the North Carolina group of fire fighters that his unit, consisting of 31 men, would be in Washington for the gala celebration—the one event set aside for firemen throughout the year.

First on the official list of companies which have said definitely they would travel to the Capital for the Labor Day celebration was Ebeneezer, N. Y.

Early next week, the parade committee will meet at one of the downtown fire companies of the District, according to present plans. At this gathering, chairmen are to be assigned and all future work delegated to the men.

The principal chairmanships will be held by firemen on the active rolls of the District Fire Department. A committee, known as the citizens' committee, and headed by Odell S. Smith, also will be appointed.

This year the firemen are unselfishly giving their own time to promoting the parade, which, it is hoped, will be the greatest in its history of eleven years.

While an official program of last year's parade was published, Sergt. Bargagni stated yesterday that he does not plan one personally this year, and that if one is to appear, it will be gotten out by firemen.

At present he is busily engaged on the prize list, which he hopes to mail to all companies, which contemplate attending the parade. These will be in the mails by Monday.

G.W.U. Professor in Radio Talk Says Middle Class Is Slipping Back.

The homeless wayfarer—the "Brother, can you spare a dime?" man—may soon shuffle into American society as a new predominant class, according to predictions sounded by Dr. Dudley Wilson Willard, head of the sociology department at George Washington University, in a radio broadcast last night.

"America's middle classes are drifting as helplessly as the classes beneath them and are now in danger of slipping over the precipice," Dr. Willard said.

He plead for impartial support of the Nation's citizens for the Government's efforts in behalf of the middle classes.

An impression has been created that Government is inefficient, incompetent and unable to dispose of national resources in the interest of the whole people. Those who have challenged the right of Government to enter this field have developed this concept because they wanted things let alone, Dr. Willard asserted.

Pointing out that events had forced Government into this field on a large scale, the speaker declared that a more sympathetic and constructive attitude toward the work of the Government was needed. The dignity and worthwhileness of Government must be upheld now, of all times, he said.

"Only in this way may the new uses of Government become an added strength and not a fatal weakness of democracy," Dr. Willard warned.

"The emergency character of such Government work today deprives it of benefits of experience and tradition which lie back of the older activities. Drifting as it is into a mass of emergency public welfare work, much of which resolves itself into mere raids on the public treasury, the Government needs the intelligent support of American citizenship.

"Efforts of local governments to unload upon the Federal Government and the patronage system which entrenches one social class against another are endangering the public welfare activities undertaken by the Government," Dr. Willard warned.

Postmasters' Service Plans Face Rejection

Congress May Turn Down Idea as Interference With Patronage.

(Associated Press.)

Predictions that President Roosevelt's proposal to place all postmasters under civil service would be rejected were heard yesterday as members of Congress, seeking to retain this choice patronage, sought to learn the Chief Executive's motives.

At the same time Mr. Roosevelt's executive order governing examinations of applicants for first, second and third class offices was being given a thorough study at the Capitol.

Chairman McKellar, of the Senate Postoffice Committee, who also is the ranking Democrat on the Civil Service Committee, was the first to assert his belief that Congress would reject legislation to take the 15,032 first, second and third class postmasterships out of the realm of patronage.

Increase in Power Foreseen.

Close study of the executive order—it was in transmitting this to Postmaster General Farley that the President requested Mr. Farley to prepare legislation for general Civil Service—brought from some sources the opinion that Mr. Farley was given more power than ever in filling vacancies with Democrats.

Heretofore in the case of Presidential appointments for first, second and third class offices it was specified that the Postmaster General could reject any and all eligibles certified by the Civil Service Commission "if he shall find that such person or person is disqualified by reason of residence or character after examination."

The new order eliminates "by reason of residence or character," invests Mr. Farley with wide latitude in rejecting those certified and also increases the maximum age limit from 65 to 66 and reduces the minimum residence requirement from two years to one.

Change in Examination.

Mr. Farley and President Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission have agreed upon a change, not involved in the executive order, regarding examinations to determine the fitness of applicants for first and second class offices.

Under it the applicants will fill out a questionnaire dealing with their personal and business life.

This change was made to save the expense of investigations and to speed up the filling of the vacancies. When the Democratic administration took over, March 4, there were 2,500 postmasterships vacant. By January 1 there will be a total of 4,000.

Acting postmasters now being appointed are virtually certain of being regularly nominated by the President.

Plan Is Explained.

It was made clear that the new plan of answering questionnaires does not mean that first, second and third class postmasters have been brought in under civil service now. If the law should be changed they would be subjected to the regular civil service examination.

Many members of Congress declined to comment pending a thorough study of the executive order. Members of the House control most of the postoffice patronage, with senators reserving the right to recommend appointments in their home cities.

Senator McKellar said he was "inclined to the view that the larger postmasterships should not be under civil service."

Indianans Stage World Fair Fete

Chicago, July 13 (A.P.).—Hoosiers celebrated Indiana Day at the Worlds' Fair today, setting a fast pace.

The Indianans planned and carried through on time a program more elaborate than any yet attempted. The number of visitors to the Indiana State display, estimated by exhibit officials at 100,000 when the doors closed, broke the record for a day's attendance in a State's section.

An audience several thousand strong heard Gov. Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, assert that Indiana has pledged herself and all her resources to the maintenance of proper educational facilities for all her children.

A WELL-BID GRAND SLAM.

A WELL-BID slam, even more than a well-bid game, is generally the outcome of a finely spun web of inferences by which the partners convey to each other, step by step, valuable information regarding their holdings and distribution. A hit-or-miss method of bidding slams can result only in disaster, and in laying down rules for bidding I have been careful to safeguard every step of the process when the bidding is above the limit of a game, just as I have when it is below the game level.

Recently in a New York City duplicate game only two of the players out of seven reached the easy Grand Slam on the hand shown below:

West, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

	♠ Q 10 7 6 4 ♡ J 8 5 2 ◇ J 5 3 ♣ 10
♠ K 9 8 ♡ 9 4 3 ◇ A K 9 8 ♣ A 9 4	N W E S	♠ A J 3 ♡ — ◇ Q 10 7 6 ♣ K Q J 7 6 5
	♠ 5 2 ♡ A K Q 10 7 6 ◇ 4 2 ♣ 8 3 2

West	North	East	South
1◇(1)	Pass	3♣(2)	Pass
3NT(3)	Pass	4◇(4)	Pass
4NT(5)	Pass	5♣(6)	Pass
6♣(7)	Pass	7◇(8)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—With 3½ honor-tricks, of course, West has a sound Opening vulnerable bid.
2—East's Forcing Takeout is justified by the possession of 3 honor-tricks and a magnificent fit in the diamond suit. Exactly how far he is prepared to go in the bidding depends upon his partner's subsequent calls.
3—West's three-notrump bid is slightly suggestive of a signoff, but 4-3-3-3 distribution suggests caution.
4—East refuses to sign-off, showing support for diamonds.
5—This bid is not a denial of any strength not previously shown, but is rather an indication of willingness to play the hand at a Slam. It shows under the circumstances two Aces and the King of a bid suit. A signoff bid in this case would be five clubs or five diamonds, the latter being the stronger indication that West thinks the bidding has gone far enough.
6—East's bid of five clubs after he has forced with clubs and later shown diamond support is a Slam try.
7—West, of course, knows nothing about the Grand Slam in the offing.
8—A very fine bid. West's bid of six clubs clearly marks him with the Ace of that suit as it is extremely improbable, in view of East's length in clubs, that he could otherwise hold adequate trump support. East's holding in diamonds practically denies the possibility that West does not hold the diamond Ace. In view of his previous bids the Grand Slam is an excellent venture.

Incidentally, it will be noted that the Grand Slam should be played in the short trump suit rather than in the longer holding of East. Played in diamonds the hand is an absolute lay-down as the length in clubs is such as to afford discards for all of West's losers. Played with clubs as trump, however, the success of the contract would depend upon a spade finesse.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

If North and South have overambitiously reached a contract of six hearts, against which West has opened his fourth-best spade, how should South plan the play of the hand to make his contract?

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ A K 9 7 ♡ A 10 9 ◇ A Q ♣ 5 4 3 2
♠ J 8 4 3 2 ♡ 4 3 ◇ K J 8 3 ♣ K 10	N W E S	♠ 10 5 ♡ 7 6 5 2 ◇ 7 4 2 ♣ Q J 7 6
	♠ Q 6 ♡ K Q J 8 ◇ 10 9 6 5 ♣ A 9 5

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

High and low—which shall it be? Judy is thinking of crowns. For morning street wear she adores her new visor hat in two kinds of straw. The young woman in the striped frock and dark jacket prefers the pancake hat, while her companion is pleased with a high crown.

Cape lines and cartwheels! They grow larger every day. If you are the type for big hats don't be without one this summer. They are grand looking with soft crepe and chiffon dresses. At a luncheon and style show Judy notices the black rough straw hat and its matching belt.

Linen and baku that are light as a feather appear in shallow crowns and mammoth brims. The manikin wears one of white linen trimmed with bachelor buttons. Rick-rack adorns her frock. The chechia that shoots into the air is of white fabric stitched in brown and accented with brown pleated belting ribbon.

For a tea dance Judy wears a simple dress of white sheer crepe with a tucked waistline and a tunic. The shirred neck ruffle is very flattering. Stitching is the only trimming used on the white crepe hat. For dancing the brim unsnaps and leaves a very becoming turban. The same idea is used in sports hats.

Milady Looks Like Grandma In Fall Furs

By the Meanderer.

There was a wedding in June, a glorious white affair. There was a bride and a bridegroom, there were maids and music and flowers. There were smiles and tears and kisses. There was punch. There were rice and old shoes, friends and forgotten sweethearts. You were there, shopper, bedecked in your wide-brimmed hat and fluffy organdie frock. But where was your gift to the newly-weds? Where is it now, in fact? There, there, shopper, don't shy away. We'll forget these things. Hark ye, though, 'tis never too late to mend, or something of that sort.

Here the Meanderer would proffer a helping hand. On just such an errand, and tardy, it's true, she found in an F street store innumerable gift suggestions. They fall under categories: (1) sterling silver (2) moderately priced. A coaster set for six, $4. Pair of console candle sticks, $2.50. Card tray, $6. Candy and nut dish, $4. Cream and sugar set, gold lined, $5. Outside the first classification, but still in the second were: black glass pewter wine bottle, $3.50; midget brass call-bell, $2. Inside category 1: center piece set including flower bowl and two candelabra, $300, Ahem.

The gay, or not so gay, nineties are still with us, the fur coats are saying in their silent way. Great puffed sleeves, fitted waists and flare skirts, full length or three-quarters, just as you please, so long as you look as grandmother looked. The Meanderer all but bought a tempting black seal swagger model. The notch collar, cut to stand up in the back, acts as a stunning frame for milady's face. Add a small hat for further jauntiness. Another shop shows a gray satin cape trimmed in tiers of silver fox. Picture it as the collar to your new gray coat. Or see yourself in a deep rose evening dress with this around your shoulders. Why not wear it with your new tea gown? "Look!" spectators whisper among themselves, "That's Mrs. Shopper, the best-dressed woman in town."

Children's styles have a way of being very interesting this summer. Rompers have been replaced by toddle suits. Baby bonnets have gone Quaker. A particularly attractive brother-and-sister set in white pique had sailor collars and trimmings of red and blue. Suit and dress, $1.95 each. A small toddler's outfit in handkerchief linen bound in silk broadcloth will make an ideal costume for the 10-month old. For the baby who wants to be mighty like a Quaker choose from a wide selection of pink, blue and white bonnets.

What would you say to a luncheon consisting of a liberal serving of crab flake salad, sliced tomatoes and iced coffee, for the sum of 25 cents. Like it? We'll tell you where.

Good buys for the day: Turkish towells, 11 cents; shirt and tie, $1.65; cotton blouses, 50 cents; bath powder, big box, 50 cents; children's silk pajama set, three pieces, $1.29.

What Today Means

"CANCER."

THIS July 14 would seem to be propitious for the signing of any agreements or documents. On the surface there will appear to be much activity in the business world, but much of it will be pointless and of no avail. Women will not get along together on this date and social gatherings of that sex will tend to bristle with jealousies and bitter feelings.

The child born on this July 14 will be inclined to get into scrapes unless kept occupied both mentally and physically. You will find him fond of games that stimulate the imagination. He will not be one to sit back and wait to be amused but will go out and find or make his own excitement. Very obedient.

If July 14 is the date of your birth it is well-nigh impossible to anticipate the course your life will take. Fate has been good to you in many ways. You are blessed with a better-than-average mind, you have good health, and you have many fine qualities. What you are and what you will become depend very largely on your own doing. It lies entirely within yourself whether you will rise to great heights or whether you will stay on the level with the average man. You can with reasonable success turn your hand to most anything; your greatest difficulty in life will be to find something with sufficient appeal and interest to keep you working for a lifetime. You are a selfless person and you think little of your own advancement.

Born on July 14, you are a person of high ideals, and you have a profound religious feeeling. You are probably a regular churchgoer, and unlike many, you try to live up to the demands of your church. You are a loyal person and you enjoy having congenial friends about you.

Maple Furniture Makes Child's Room Charming

This nursery room brings many "ohs" and "ahs" from those who visit the model rooms display in a progressive department store. Truly juvenile is this room for a child, with all things child size. No difficult stretching to reach playthings, or to put away his clothes, is necessary in this room. This scaling of furnishings to a child's convenience is highly important, students of child psychology agree.

Furniture Scaled to Juvenile Size Aid in Teaching Youngsters Self-Dependence and Neatness, Say Child Training Experts.

Low furniture built for children fits admirably into the sloping-walled nursery. It's easy to see that a room as attractive as this may be arranged in an attic, or in a gabled corner of the house which might have been used for storage. Part of the appeal of the room seems to be the broken wall lines.

All the furniture is of maple, reproductions of pieces from grandmother's days. Children like benches, as they give greater opportunity for the inevitable climbing than chairs. Note the sturdy character of the benches shown. Such benches may be unperturbed in their role of happy hunting ground for children.

The hooked rug's childish pattern, the toys and dolls, seem esential in this room. Playthings seem almost to live, with the perfect background.

In a corner of the room, not showing, is a child-size lowboy of maple, with three drawers. Atop the chest is a mirror attached to a maple treasure box with a hinged lid. The drawers and the mirror box are easily opened by a small child and would be of distinct help in teaching the small hands to keep possessions in order.

The woman's department of The Washington Post will gladly answer inquiries about the nursery room pictured, if those interested will call National 4205, Extension 3.

Care in Washing Keeps Color New

Many housewives are terror stricken when they first attempt to wash a colored dress. Will it run? Will it fade? Will its original freshness be lost forever? she asks herself. If she will take a few simple precautions, she need not fear unsatisfactory results.

Colored clothes should be washed in cool water, rinsed in cold, wrapped in turkish towels for a few moments and dried quickly in the shade. They should be ironed while still damp, and never sprinkled and left rolled up. If clothes are not badly soiled, they will launder more successfully. Severe rubing will not only fade the colors, but will weaken the fabric as well.

Treat that favorite chiffon (yes, one can wash even chiffon) with respect, and that printed linen with tenderness, and your summer wardrobe will repay you with a longer and more useful service.

Happy Young Friends Shun Jealous Girl

Sixteen-Year-Old Suffers Through Feeling of Inferiority.

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne.

A girl of 16 who always has been markedly jealous of her younger sister has been especially unhappy during the last three or four years because of her inability to make friends.

Watching her when she is meeting new people, one sees in her manner an underlying eagerness and strain, a kind of painful pleading to be liked and admired, a thing which in itself makes people ill at ease with her. At the same time, she is defensive at the slightest word that might be construed as criticism or ridicule, one sees an inner shrinking and withdrawal, accompanied by an added superficial aggressiveness.

At such moments, she is most unattractive, for she either covers her hurt feelings with a supercilious air that makes other girls call her conceited, or gives vent to mean critical remarks that make them think of her as unsporting and bad tempered.

It is certain that this girl hungers excessively for love and approval and that her fear of not getting it, along with the suspicious, aggressive attitude which this fear has engendered, will be a life-long social liability.

Her troubles began in the nursery, when, either through thoughtlessness or through real favoritism, her parents made her feel less loved than her baby sister.

Jealousy, thus deeply enmeshed in the very roots of her emotional life, has become the dominant note of her character. Every relationship she enters upon sooner or later will be clouded or warped by it. She will have few friends and she will feel inferior and hateful toward most persons.

Every rebuff which her own manner provokes will but serve further to isolate her in her loneliness and social failure.

Bake Kippered Herring With Scalloped Noodles

Canned fish is a labor-saving food, for it can be served from the can if you like. It is convenient as well as good, in school or other lunches, or in salads, because it can be stored until it is wanted, and quickly and easily used. Kippered herring, canned herring roe, sardines and canned salmon are among the most easily obtained and cheapest of the many canned fish products. While there are many ways of serving the last three, perhaps you have not known what to do with kippered herring, except to heat it and serve it just as it is. Scalloped kippered herring with macaroni, spaghetti or noodles is a most tasty dish. All of these products are enjoyed best when combined with something of rather pronounced flavor, and kippered herring is especially appetizing.

Kippered Herring and Macaroni.

¼ pound macaroni, broken into small pieces
½-pound can kippered herring
2 tablespoons butter or other fat
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup buttered crumbs
1 pint milk

Cook the macaroni in boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Remove the skin from the fish and cut into pieces. Make a sauce of the fat, flour, salt and milk. Put the macaroni and fish into a greased baking dish in alternate layers, pouring some of the sauce over each layer. Cover with the buttered crumbs and bake until the sauce bubbles and the crumbs are brown.

Dainty Frocks Endangered by Sportive Dogs

By Dare

ALL MY best friends have dogs! Very nice dogs, not too large, and quite clean. My friends are devoted to the dogs—and I am devoted to my friends—and don't misunderstand me, pee-lease! I like dogs, too. But, ah! Viola! That "but" is what I want to discuss.

Now some of these dogs seem to obey at once; they understand that "down" does not mean "up" and that "no" does not mean "yes." I can go to see these dogs—I mean their masters, or mistresses—and not be afraid to wear the daintiest and most fragile dress. These are the very nice dogs, and thoroughbred.

Hunting Chorus.

But . . . there are the dogs who start a hunting chorus the moment I appear at the front door. "Quiet, sir!" or "That's enough, quiet now!" seems to be the cue for louder and more barking once inside the door. I brace myself for the impact of four paws, which inevitably follows the scurry of sharp toe-nails on the floor. If I raise my skirt enough to protect it . . . I sacrifice my stockings . . . so I smile, oh, so feebly, and hold out both hands to ward off the ecstatic nippings and the so very wet tongue. He is such a good watchdog that my friends do not wish to stop him from barking entirely . . . it is all very difficult. This, too, is a very nice dog, and a thoroughbred.

I have heard of a large turkish toweling bag into which any very nice dog may be popped. It ties around his neck and covers his entire body and muddy paws. This is for taking the very nice dog driving and letting him run in the country, or go for a swim. After which he goes in the bag.

Page Inventor.

That is splendid for driving with a very nice dog, but what does one do when they visit him, while he is out of the bag? One can not always wear rough tweeds and brogues. . . . A suit of armor made of one of the lovely new transparent, nontearable, waterproof materials, would be sufficiently compact to slip into a purse. It could be put on while waiting in the vestibule.

Won't somebody please invent such a garment? Pee-lease!!

Maybe you think you have all the bathing suits you need? But wouldn't you like to have one of the kind only we could design for you and tell you how to make? The one I mean is yours to make for just sending a stamped (3-cent), self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet which tells you how to make it.

* * * *

A nightgown has become very much like an evening gown—or a tea gown—in fact, one wears it in or out of bed. And all the time it is really a nightgown—and one sleeps in it!

There is one which shows long sleeves and classical lines, and an adorable tie bow effect in front. The material is crepe satin, and the nightgown an expression of the latest trend in nightgowns.

* * * *

A beach hat and bag! They, too, are in this week's illustrated leaflet, so if you would like to see how to make an adorable set, oh, so very easily—just send for the leaflet!

Au revoir.

Try These Original Ice Cream Flavors

If you are one of the American ice cream addicts, who make their own, a deviation from the vanilla-chocolate-strawberry formula will make you as proud of the dish as you are of your originality.

A delectable spoonful that will melt in your mouth borrows its flavor from the Christmas candy cane. Formula: crushed peppermints in the vanilla mixture. St. Patrick himself would welcome a dish of pale green cream, with wintergreen flavoring. Try a few dried figs or dates, chopped fine, or the ever-popular coconut. Peanut brittle, crushed and added, will delight the apetite of any family.

Opal Dream

Inexpensive Jewelry of Today Rivals Ancient Gems.

Many years ago there was a craftsman who made ornaments for lovely ladies. Slim wrists of Oriental dancers sparkled with his handiwork, regal heads were decked with the creations of his dreams of beauty. But of all the jewels with which he worked the one he loved the most was the opal.

One day he found an opal of great size and price. It was as large as his closed hand, lustrous as the star above the crescent moon, and luminous with elusive fires. He would make of this opal, he thought, the most perfect jewel he had ever made, so that seekers of beauty would see it and wonder.

With reverence he worked, as he carved his dreams into the shifting colors, until he had fashioned a bracelet fit to adorn the loveliest lady of all time. That was so many years ago that most of the legends have been forgotten, and the craftsman's jewels are sealed in undiscovered tombs.

The other day we saw a lady in a floating, rainbow gown, each of her slender wrists was encircled by three translucent bracelets of opalescent colors. She bought them somewhere for a small price, but their beauty was that of the opal, for craftsmen often have the same dreams.

Canned Foods May Stand in Tins Safely

Idea That Foodstuffs Spoil in Opened Containers Is False.

Is it safe to leave canned foods standing in a can after it has been opened? Many people have an idea that there is some mysterious and dangerous change that takes place when the contents of the can are exposed to the air, although they do not worry about the food as long as the can stands unopened on the pantry shelf. In answer to the many inquiries on this point, the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture has said repeatedly:

"Food is perfectly safe if left standing in a can under proper conditions of storage after the can is opened. In fact, the can is often the most convenient container in which to keep the food. Food spoils no faster and no slower in the open can than in any other container. You can leave food in the can just as safely as you can leave it in a dish. But, of course, you have to use the same care to keep it cool and covered."

Some acid foods like fruit and tomatoes, when stored in an open can, do tend to dissolve iron. This may give the food a slightly metallic taste that is not harmful. If the label on the can advises removing the contents as soon as the can is opened, it is because the canners think that an open can, partly filled with food, is not attractive in appearance.

Another wrong notion about canned foods is the idea that the liquid in a can of vegetables, like peas or beans, should be drained off and not used. Formerly this liquor was sometimes too salty, but not at present. That juice contains valuable nutrients and discarding it is a distinct waste.

Wednesday, August 9, Scout Day at Airport Pool.

Wednesday, August 23, Scout Day at McKinley Tech Pool.

MANY Washington Scout leaders are enrolling for the course in older boy leadership, which will be conducted at Camp Roosevelt over the week-end of July 29 and 30.

Thomas J. Keane, national Sea Scout director and author of "Lubbers Afloat," has been secured to direct the group. It is expected that upwards of 60 men will enroll.

Sea Scouting is the advanced branch of the program of the Boy Scouts of America, appealing especially to older boys and young men over 15 years of age. Approximately twelve Scout troops in Washington now have Sea Scout divisions connected with them.

Sea Scouting has grown rapidly in the United States, having made a 40 per cent gain in membership in 1932. Every indication is that Sea Scouting in Washington will develop rapidly in the future.

Glen Echo Day Tuesday.

Glen Echo's Crystal Pool will be the scene of much excitement and fun next Tuesday as Scouts from the District attend the Scout Day at the pool and compete for the three awards offered. Progressive swimming tests are open to all Scouts not over 15 years of age. Swim suit emblems will be awarded to Scouts who successfully complete the following requirements:

Minnow Aquatic Club offers a round felt badge 2¾ inches in diameter for proficiency in these requirements: Jump into water over your own depth, level off, swim 25 feet, make a sharp turn and return 25 feet.

Porpoise Aquatic Club gives a felt badge 3¼ inches in diameter if the following requirements are completed satisfactorily: Swim 50 yards, using any stroke. Swim 25 yards, using back stroke. Recover object in 6 to 8 feet of water, using surface dive. Perform a straight dive with fairly good form.

The Whale Aquatic Club gives a 4¼-inch emblem for proficiency in the following requirements: Swim 150 yards, using any two strokes. Surface dive, recovering three objects. Swim 50 yards free style in 45 seconds or less, and demonstrate four different swim strokes.

Tenderfoot: "What does the Washington Monument stand for?"

Second class: "It would look fine lying down, wouldn't it?"

Lecturer: "Friends, if we were to turn and look ourselves squarely in the face, what would you find we needed most?"

Dense silence—then a small boy piped up: "A rubber neck, mister—is that right?"

Tramp: "The lady next door gave me a piece of home-made cake. Won't you give me something, too?"

Lady: "Yes, I'd better give you a digestive tablet."

Roosevelt is Jammed.

Much to the delight of Washington Scout leaders, the first week of the second period is filled to overflowing, and even some Scouts were turned away. The report for the week shows 226 Scouts enrolled in this record-breaking week. There are still a few vacancies for the second week of the period, starting on July 17. Plenty of room is left for the last periods, but the registrations should be filled soon.

Bathing suits will be required and may be rented for 10 cents. There are no dues or fees of any kind. Aquatic Club qualification tests will be given from 10 to 12 o'clock on June 18. For further information see Capt. Edward H. McCrahon, pool director, at Glen Echo, phone Bradley 66.

Wilson Offers Many Lures.

Recent check-ups reveal that 14 separate activities may be participated in at Camp Wilson, Burnt Mills, Md. Good swimming, ping pong, volley ball, horizontal bar, jumping hurdle, jumping pit, horseshoe pitching, pillow fighting, traveling rings, barrel tilting, nature study, handicraft, instructions in cooking, merit badge work, and many other scouting opportunities are offered. A commissary is conducted by "Bill" Murray and is at the Scouts disposal. Courts of honor and review are held at the camp each week at 7:30 and are well attended.

Each Friday has been set aside as Scout day at the American League Baseball Park. No exceptions will be made to rule of uniforms at all times. Scouts who attend in uniform will be required to pay the 10-cent tax, and those without uniform the full price.

Physical Examinations.

Scouts must be given their physical examination before going to camp. Come the Thursday before you leave for Roosevelt, 7:30 p. m. at Scout headquarters.

Scout Smiles.

EDITED BY HOWARD ENNES.

Scoutmaster: "Will the scribe read the minutes of the last meeting?"

Scribe: "The last meeting consisted of exactly 116 minutes and a half minute."

Book Agent: "You ought to buy an encyclopedia for your boy now that he is going to school."

Father: "Not much, stranger. Let him walk same as I did."

Ten scouts of Troop 620 camped in the Older Boys' camp during one week of the first period. The troop cooked its own meals and slept in one of the cabins. William Teachum and Joseph Flowers made a collection of butterflies, dragonflies, and lizards, which they will mount for the troop. John Altmann and Joseph Flowers passed second class. Submitted by Joseph D. Flowers, assistant scoutmaster.

Troop 205, Cabin John, Md., constructed floats used in the Cabin John Park Fire Department parade, which won the first prize of five dollars. The floats were constructed under the direction of Patrol Leaders D. Smith, L. Potter, and Senior Patrol Leader Austin White. The prize will be awarded at the troop meeting tonight. Submitted by Austin White, S. P. L.

Troop 56's meeting on July 7 was featured by a talk on leadership by the scoutmaster, Mr. H. C. Tucker. —Submitted by Joseph Campbell.

79 Stressing Advancement.

Several tests were passed, both second and first class, at the troop meeting of July 7, by Scouts of Troop 79. At the court of honor at Camp Wilson on July 8, three merit badges were gained. Howard Ennes gained two, journalism and first aid, and Frank McInturff, one, first aid. Several Scouts are planning to attend the court tomorrow night, and several advancements are expected.

Edwin L. Maschmeyer, scoutmaster, will be away tonight on his vacation, which he is taking in New York State. He is expected to be back next week, however, and will lead a group of about 15 Scouts at Camp Roosevelt for one week, beginning July 24.

Work on the large papier mache totem poles is expected to begin tonight. Scouts have been asked to bring newspapers to the meeting tonight. These papers will be placed in water to soak before they are used on the poles.

Campers Work on Nature Trail.

Troop work on the Camp Roosevelt nature trail has begun, according to the July 10 issue of The Rough Rider. A rough trail has been laid which will have to be more fully developed. Many interesting specimens abound on the trail and any that are not found on the trail itself will be transplanted. The Nature Lodge Zoo now contains a snake, two lizards, and 30 turtles. The old name, "Bughouse," of the nature cabin has been more appropriately named the "Roosevelt Nature Lodge," in keeping with the general Roosevelt theme being worked out by Assistant Camp Director Bob Myers. Activities of the nature department during the past week included a "toitle dolby," two early trips to Blum Point, expeditions along the cliffs for fossils, and hikes up and along Fisherman's Creek.

A week of successful camping was enjoyed by some of the members of the troop in spite of the heavy rain July 2.

Four more Scouts left Sunday for Camp Roosevelt, making ten from our troop so far this year and several are planning to go later. Five of these boys are spending the entire season in camp. We expect them to come back much better fitted for service in the troop. Although the troop is somewhat scattered, we intend to continue our regular meetings through the summer.—Submitted by S. M. McCulloch.

City of Winchester Defers Tax Sale

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., July 13.—Hoping that business recovery will gain such momentum that taxpayers with delinquent levies may pay the back taxes and save their properties from public auction, the city of Winchester has postponed its tax sale July 15 to August 16.

Action was taken by the Common Council on the advice of City Treasurer W. A. Baker, who expressed the belief that many land owners would be able to pay the levies by the middle of August.

At the same meeting the council protested the failure of the Virginia State Corporation Commission to allot any part to Winchester, of more than $7,000,000 in Federal funds, which are to be made available for highway work in this State.

Annapolis to Receive Transport Tomorrow

The Naval transport, U. S. S. Henderson, will arrive at Annapolis, Md., tomorrow, from the West Coast, with officers, who are being transferred from ships now in the Pacific and the Canal Zone to stations on the East Coast.

The Henderson will leave Annapolis July 17 for Boston, where she wil be given routine overhaul before her departure for the Canal Zone and the West Coast about September 2.

France Seeking Senate Seat as His Vindication

G.O.P. Leader in Maryland Tells of Ejection From Chicago Convention.

Port Deposit, Md., July 13 (A.P.). Dr. Joseph Irwin France, Maryland's irrepressible Republican, today announced his candidacy for nomination to the United States Senate to vindicate his ejection from the Republican national convention hall in Chicago last year.

"I earnestly appeal," he said in a statement, "to the members of my own party and to the people of my State to nominate and elect me to the United States Senate in vindication of Maryland's right to be heard at that convention in behalf of the principles to which we have always been devoted."

Dr. France, who served the State as senator from 1917 to 1923, was a candidate in 1932 for the Presidential nomination in opposition to former President Herbert Hoover.

He describes the ejection incident, which was probably the most sensational of the entire convention, in his statement as follows:

"I made a rush for the rostrum to place in nomination the name of Calvin Coolidge. The sergeants at arms were ordered to eject me. I fought them off. Then, in violation of the laws of the United States and of the Republican party, they called the police and I was thrown out by physical force."

The former senator now seeks the seat held by Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough.

His statement, a lengthy one, pledges support to President Roosevelt as follows:

"When I shall again become your senator, not only my personal convictions, but my sense of duty to America and to the world will compel me, as I do now, to uphold and assist our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, in the unselfish and devoted efforts he is making to restore a distracted and broken-hearted world, and to secure to all men their God-bestowed rights."

Modernize with Gas FOR YEAR ROUND COMFORT

all the YEAR 'ROUND

You're glad to get rid of business burdens for a week or two in summer. But if you still use an old-fashioned heating plant you deny yourself a world of comfort and freedom that would be yours every day in the year.

For a very low initial cost, which is spread out over 30 months, you can have an automatic gas heating plant which will mean the realization of dreams to the entire family. For the husband it means no more furnace tending, for gas is delivered to the furnace only as needed, regulated by an automatic thermostat to maintain even temperatures. For the wife it means less cleaning of drapes and curtains, for gas generates no soot or vapor to seep through the house. For the children it can mean a recreation room in the basement, which is possible through the elimination of fuel storage and ashes.

Every member of the family benefits!

Why not join the 5,500 other Washington families who have installed gas heat and embark on a vacation that lasts the whole year through.

AUTOMATIC Gas HEATING PLANTS as Low as $175

You can enjoy gas heat without removing your furnace. This unit is installed in your present heating system and provides efficient, even warmth without a moment's attention on your part. Come in or telephone for complete details!

Fine cotton cloths—Markets are reported moderately active, with broad inquiry for some fancy goods and in standard constructions.

Rayon—Trade reports say that some mills have not advanced prices to the basis of 65 cents for 150 deniers, and that certain sellers have continued to sell the entire September output at the former level of 60 cents for this denier.

Dried fruits—Importers are said to be informing customers of a probable sharp advance in new crop foreign products owing to depreciation in the dollar.

Lead—Demand has fallen off slightly since the latest advance in prices. Consumers are said to be confining purchases to carlots for prompt and August shipments.

Copper—Trade gossip is to the effect that some of the larger producers are able to show an operating profit on the basis of the present 9-cent-a-pound market.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—American Rolling Mill Co. has formulated a conversion plan for its 4½ per cent notes maturing November 1, of which about $13,900,000 "D" new 5 per cent notes will be offered holders of the present securities, with the privilege of converting each $1,000 note into 40 shares of common stock.

The first dozen important chain store and mail order systems to report June sales had an aggregate gain of nearly 7 per cent over dollar volume in June, 1932, says Standard Statistics Co. Retail prices, it adds, "are likely to show relatively steady advances during the medium term," although such a prospect is expected to do "little more than moderate the rate of expansion in volumes," since gains in employment and wages have already developed "and further substantial improvement in consumer buying power is likely to be created by the fall months."

Bank clearings for the country last week rose to $5,351,557,000, as compared with $4,125,834,000 for the corresponding period last year, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today. The gain in New York was 43.4 per cent, with the aggregate for centers outside of New York up 3.2 per cent.

National Steel Corporation announced today that for the first time since 1931 all vessels of its fleet were now operating in the ore and coal-carrying trade on the Great Lakes. The seventh and last ship has sailed from winter quarters to take on cargo.

Bonds Resume Price Soaring To New Highs

Six-tenths Gain Recorded as Sales Mount to $20,836,000.

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—Some of the bullish enthusiasm in stocks bubbled over into the bond market today and inspired a renewal of brisk bidding for secondary descriptions.

Volume increased on the rise with transfers totaling $20,836,000, against $17,300,000 yesterday. The average of 60 domestic corporate issues climbed .6 of a point.

Rail loans of speculative flavor were apparently freshened by the recent reaction for a resumption of the advance. Gains of 1 to 3 points were well distributed through the group, Rock Island, Erie, New Haven, New York Central, Nickel Plate and Pennsylvania.

Profit taking in the late trading dulled the edge of advance in some parts of the utility and industrial lists, but the close saw a majority of plus signs in the principal trading mediums.

There was crisp buying in some of the communications issues, notably Western Union 5s, on further bullish conjecture on earnings for the balance of the year. Some of the light and power issues advanced 1 to 2 points in a somewhat belated response to the favorable showing of the weekly power output figures.

After months of routine activity heavy buying appeared all through the South American list in response to news from Washington that the Government might seek to build up trade with the southern continent through the medium of conferences. Argentine issues were particularly strong. Other parts of the foreign list were irregularly higher. Obligations of principal Europeans nations closed higher.

United States Governments reversed yesterday's course by dipping slightly on light trading.

Goods Markets.

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—Pending word to go ahead under the recovery act, cotton goods sellers are doing comparatively little. New prices are being formulated on higher ranges. Some second-hand offerings in the gray goods divisions have been sold readily at ½ cents under current prices. The demand for worsted dress goods and coatings can not be supplied due to a scarcity of weaving yarns. Sales of silk goods are very moderate at fairly prices. Rayon yarn producers are sold very closely through September. Burlaps were quiet.

Stock Trading Volume Is Largest Since 1930

Heavy Late Profit-Taking Trims Soaring Prices to Moderate Gain of 1.1 Points; Sales Reach Total of 7,460,520 Shares.

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—Stocks soared and subsided today in the most buoyant session to date of the surging bull market of 1933.

Led by the spurting alcoholic group, shares of all categories joined in the upswing that, at one time, carried some issues up for extreme gains of around 16 points.

The buying rush started with the opening gong and gained momentum as the session advanced. The machinery of the New York Stock Exchange was almost swamped at times and the ticker tape was behind several minutes throughout most of the hectic business day. The huge and sudden piling up of profits, however, was too much for many of the "in-and-outers" and the "cashing-in" jam of the last half hour cut most of the more pronounced advances down to around 1 to 3 or more points.

It was the heaviest trading session since May 5, 1930. Sales totaled 7,460,520 shares. The Associated Press-Standard Statistics average for 90 selected issues advanced 1.1 points to 95.3, another new top for the past two years.

While some market observers seemingly were mystified at the broad and sweeping resumption of the forward movement, others pointed out that for some days there has been considerable selling which has been absorbed without any great difficulty, and which, presumably, served as the necessary "technical corrective" for the somewhat impaired list.

Actually, there was little in the news to account for the sensational early advance and the huge trading volume. The London Economic Conference apparently was plodding along without much excitement. Business and industrial news was still good, but not much better than has been reported in the past several days. Governmental activities having to do with the industrial recovery plans were about according to expectations.

The incentive of soaring commodities was also absent. Realizing brought moderate losses in both grains and cotton.

The usual dollar motive, too, was not present.

Shipments of Hard Coal Up to 3,512,382 Tons

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, July 13.—Shipments of anthracite for the month of June, 1933, as reported to the Anthracite Institute, Primos, Pa., amounted to 3,512,382 net tons.

This is an increase, as compared with shipments during the preceding month of May, of 1,004,585 net tons, or 40.06 per cent, and when compared with June, 1932, shows an increase of 1,285,531 net tons, or 57.73 per cent.

Car and Truck Exports Increase 127 Per Cent

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, July 13.—Export shipments of cars and trucks from General Motors plants in the United States and Canada during the month of June were 127 per cent greater than in the corresponding month last year. During January and February, 1933, a considerable shortcoming under 1932 was in evidence, but since March the progress made has been so great that shipments for the first six months of the year have attained a cumulative figure 45 per cent in excess of 1932.

Wholesale and retail sales in the foreign markets of these American-made products are showing corresponding strength to justify the shipments made.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A more cheerful tone was registered on the stock exchange today owing to better New York advices and renewed support. Transatlantic issues and oil shares were actively firm, while industrials and foreign stocks also exhibited a good tone. However, gilt-edged securities and kaffirs were inclined to ease. The market closed steady.

Paris—The decline in the dollar together with yesterday's rally in Wall street lent firmness to prices on the bourse. Rentes, however, were a weak exception. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse were steady today.

U. S. Treasury Receipts

(Associated Press.)

Treasury receipts for July 11 were $7,563,875.99; expenditures, $6,033,176.60; balance, $869,651,318.35. Custom duties for 11 days of July, $6,540,516.72.

Curb Dealings Break Record Of Three Years

Market Advances Sharply as Sales Volume Rises to 1,934,000 Shares.

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—The Curb Market rose vigorously today in the heaviest trading session since June, 1930. Sales approximated 1,934,000 shares compared to 1,004,000 Wednesday.

Distillery issues again featured the rise. United Molasses, a low-priced stock with apparent repeal prospects, was advanced 1⅛ in a turnover, approximating 360,000 shares.

Nearly all groups moved forward in rotating fashion. Utilities spurted around midday and various specialties were taken in hand although gains were pared in late realizing.

Hiram Walker jumped nearly 7 points while Distillers Corporation, Seagrams and Canadian Industrial Alcohol advanced 3 and 5 points, respectively. Among specialties that came in for wide gains were General Tire & Rubber, up 14 points and Fajardo Sugar, up 10 on a small turnover. Pan American Airways rose 4.

Other issues closing a point or more higher included Electric Bond & Share, Commonwealth Edison, American Gas & Electric, Swift & Co., Singer Manufacturing and Parker Rustproof. Oils were narrow.

Long Standing Tobacco Suits Now Adjusted

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—The long-standing litigation between the American Tobacco Co. and certain minority stockholders on officers' bonuses and stock allotments has been settled, it was announced today.

Three suits brought against the company to annul the stock allotment authorized in 1930, to limit bonus payments and to retrieve stock issued under earlier stock allotment plans have been terminated under an agreement reached between the company and the complaining stockholders.

Under the settlement of the suit against the stock allotment plan, the issuance of 27,500 shares, including practically all of the shares allotted to the directors, is rescinded.

Plans for Bonus.

The new plan for the bonus distribution provides that in 1933 the company must first show net profits of $13,000,000 instead of approximately $11,000,000 as heretofore, and that officers shall share 10 per cent of earnings in excess of this amount.

For 1934 the minimum net profit before a bonus was put at $14,250,000. For the year 1935 and years subsequent thereto, the minimum shall be $15,500,000.

Complete details of the litigation were contained in a statement made public by Richard Reid Rogers, a stockholder and instigator of one of the suits. Discussing the new bonus provisions, he said:

Net Profits Distribution.

"If, in 1933 or in any year subsequent thereto, the net profits shall exceed $32,500,000, only 9 per cent of such excess should be distributable as bonus until the profits reach $35,000,000.

"Between $35,000,000 and $37,500,000, the bonus distributable shall be 8 per cent of the excess; between $37,500,000 and $40,000,000 the bonus shall be 7 per cent of the excess; between $40,000,000 and $42,500,000 the bonus shall be 6 per cent of the excess, and for any amount exceeding $42,500,000 the bonus shall be 5 per cent of the excess."

In the case involving the stock plan, Rogers explained, it was agreed that in the future a stock allotment is to be made only after it has been approved in advance by the stockholders.

Wool Market.

Boston, July 13 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Western grown wools are a little slower at the recently advanced prices. Moderate quantities, however, are moving. Bulk French combing 64s and finer territory wools in original bags readily bring 73@74 cents scoured basis with an occasional buyer paying up to 75 cents. Similar quality wools running to good French combing and average strictly combing staple have a ready outlet at 73 cents. Strictly combing 56s ¾ blood territory wool is fairly strong at 69@71 cents scoured basis.

London, July 13 (A.P.).—Offerings at the wool auction today amounted to 9,831 bales, of which 8,043 were sold. The good selection placed on the market met with strong competition at firm prices, the home trade and Germany being the chief buyers. Withdrawals were frequent among alipes.

Status Is Shown By Commercial National Bank

Second Statement Reveals $3,786,479 Collected by Receiver.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A second statement of Commercial National Bank, which suspended February 27, 1933, showing its condition for the quarter ended June 30, 1933, was made public yesterday by Robert C. Baldwin, receiver for this institution. It disclosed that cash collected from assets and stock assessments is $3,786,479.86. A first dividend may be paid October 1.

The document lists the book value of the bank's assets at date of suspension as $14,754,877.56 and that of additional assets acquired since suspension as $1,400.29. A 100 per cent stock assessment for $1,000,000 is next listed, resulting in $15,756,277.85 as total assets to be accounted for.

Cash collected from assets totals $3,697,646.32 and that collected from additional assets is $498.96. Cash collected from stock assessment aggregates $88,334.58, resulting in the foregoing total. Offsets allowed on assets amount to $267,718.50. No losses have been charged off on assets or stock assessment.

Assets Still Uncollected.

Of the remaining assets, $10,790,326.07 are uncollected assets; $88, uncollected additional assets, and $911,665.42, uncollected stock assessment, making a total of $11,702,079.49 remaining uncollected assets and $15,756,277.85 total assets accounted for.

Profit-Taking Reduces Wheat Rise to Losses

All grains except oats eclipsed anew the season's top record quotations, but persistent profit-taking, with curtailment of aggressive buying, was effective later in more than offsetting fresh upturns. A decidedly calming influence on the rye market was announcement from Argentina that the rye crop there was the largest in several years.

Wheat closed easy, ½ to 1¼ under yesterday's finish; rye, ⅝ to ¾ down; corn, unchanged to 1½ lower; oats, ¾ to ⅞ off, and provisions showing 5 to 25 cents decline.

Limits of Rise.

At no time did any grain save rye get much more than a cent over yesterday's latest figures. Rye at the outset climbed a little more than 2 cents, but soon tumbled back 5 cents from the early peak, and subsequently proved unable to recover more than part of the loss.

A few enthusiasts continued to talk of possibilities of $2 a bushel wheat, and had visions that the rye market was already in what amounted to a "corner."

In the main, though, traders both in breadstuffs and feedstuffs acted on opinions of pit notables that the cereal markets were in a rather unhealthy state for the time being, prices having had a phenomenal advance, and that the situation suggested conservatism on the buying side.

Selling on Advances.

Selling on price advances formed the rule in all grains. Strikingly in contrast with recent experience, the grain markets most of the time today kept within narrow limits of fluctuations.

All of the grains, however, responded quickly to any good-sized dealings, with a general disposition shown to accept quick profits on either side of the markets. For the most part, transactions were in small lots. An advance of more than 9 points in British exchange had only a transient effect on wheat.

Rains Southwest and West tended to pull corn and oats prices down. Provisions followed declines of hog values and of grains.

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—Wheat crop conditions are poor in some parts of Union Pacific Railroad territory, but are favorable in Idaho, Washington and Oregon, said Carl R. Gray, president of the road, today.

A longer haul is expected on wheat from this territory he said, since a large part of it will be moved to Eastern milling centers. A section of Kansas served by the road has a fair crop, but in other parts of Kansas and Nebraska it was reported by Gray as "very poor."

Probable Dividend Date.

There is no official indication as to the probable date of payment of the first dividend to depositors and creditors. Should the receivership follow the general practice, one might be available by October 1, or approximately 30 days after the 90-day period for the filing of claims.

There is no means of computing at this time what the initial dividend will be or what the eventual return to depositors or creditors may amount to. These depend on the amount of collections from assets. The number of stockholders is understood to be approximately 150, and that of active deposits at approximately 18,000.

Cotton Ticker Installed.

The ticker gives the Washington office continuous quotations direct from the New York Cotton Exchange, as well as from the New Orleans Cotton Exchange.

Washington is evincing increasing interest in commodities and the new service will keep pace with the market, at all times. Fenner & Beane, now Fenner, Beane & Ungerleider, was originally a cotton house and has correspondents throughout the cotton belt. It is also one of the largest brokerage houses in the country, with membership in all important exchanges. The Washington office of the firm recently has been considerably expanded in personnel and floor space.

Economist Suggests Placing Czar in Charge of Utilities

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, July 13.—The public utilities, in the face of disrupting forces of both political and economic character, should give serious consideration to the appointment of a "Czar," who would take steps to correct the conditions which have contributed to the agitation against them, F. J. Lisman, banker and economist, points out in the leading article of the July 20 issue of the Public Utilities Fortnightly, made public today.

In answering the question of how far regulation of a public utility will go in interfering with the legitimate interests of the public as well as of its stockholders, Mr. Lisman states that it is certain to go a long way, especially if public utility officials combat regulation instead of cooperating for the purpose of directing it toward intelligent and constructive ends. In the present impassioned campaign against the holding company, he contends there is, in fact, an inclination to "throw out the child with the dirty bath water" as the German proverb has it.

"How can the electric industry meet the situation which now confronts it?" asks Mr. Lisman.

"Suppose the public utility corporations (represented, for example, by the Edison Electric Institute), should call a conference for the purpose of concerted constructive action in guiding regulation along sound, constructive channels.

"Suppose that each company had one vote for, say, every block of customers up to 250,000 and one additional vote for each additional unit of that number. Suppose these representatives selected a committee not exceeding five in number, whose sole function would be to select a representative or czar to cope with Federal legislation and to direct plans for self-regulation. Suppose that representative had broad powers for that purpose; he need not to be one of the five members of the committee."

Mississippi Cotton Curb Drive Called Success

Jackson, Miss., July 13 (A.P.).—Mississippi cotton acreage reduction campaign managers today termed the drive in this State "a success," as incomplete returns from the field following last night's deadline showed 96,454 growers pledging 878,914 acres to the plow. The Mississippi quota is 984,000 acres.

"If we miss the numerical acreage goal, we believe we will hit the baleage quota and that is the real objective," said Assistant Administrator E. H. White. Acreage cut pledges in today were estimated to represent 360,350 bales of cotton. Farm leaders estimated monetary benefits to growers already stood at $15,000,000.

South Is Called Best Field for Future Activity

(From Manufacturers Record.)

Baltimore, July 13.—As a field for new enterprises, the South has its greatest opportunity and it offers America's greatest opportunity, both agriculturally and industrially. This is clearly shown in the 1933 Blue Book of Southern Progress just issued by the Manufacturers Record, Baltimore.

Calling attention to the pronounced trend of the industrial decentralization movement toward the South, it shows that investment in new plants and extensive expansion programs for existing plants continued through 1932 and the early months of 1933 despite chaotic business conditions prevailing throughout the world.

"While this development was not comparable to the boom period," says the Blue Book, "the number and variety of small plants which are being established indicate that business men and investors are taking advantage of the opportunity presented by the South's abundant and varied resources of raw materials, available power and adequate transportation, to build not alone for the present but for future needs.

Industries in South.

Cotton mill extensions, knitting mills, textile finishing, rayon and silk mills, men's cotton suits, cottonseed oil mills, shirt factories, cotton gins and compresses, woolen mills, mining, chemicals, steel products, metal products, veneer works, woodworking, lumber, printing, ice and cold storage, food processing, building materials, fertilizer, packing houses, flour and feed, lime, paving materials, naval stores, pulpwood, paper, fiberboard, drykilns, sewer pipe, paints, stone, sand and gravel, tobacco, ink, rice mills, furniture, quarries, peanut shelling, automobile assembly plants, electrical appliances, lamp chimneys, bottles, garments.

"Expanding mineral industries, increasing iron and steel activities, woodpulp and paper mills and wookworking, ceramic and chemical developments were in evidence in the first six months of 1933. A great deal of this development is following the growing realization among individuals and concerns seeking advantageous locations, that the future industrial expansion of the country will center in the South.

Right to Future Faith.

"Measured by the records of the past, the South has proven its right to this faith in its future. Its industrial growth of the past 20 years has attracted the attention of the business and investing world. It has become the largest producing section of the country in many lines, operating some of the largest plants of their kind not only in the United States but in the world.

"From a strictly agricultural region, cotton goods and lumber producer, it has broadened its manufactures to include enterprises of practically every conceivable nature.

"The latest census figures indicate that Southern manufacturers have been less affected by the continued business depression than those elsewhere in the United States. Based on trade reports, and construction contracts reported by the Manufacturers Record Daily Construction Bulletin, it is evident that the South in 1932 and the first quarter of 1933 made a proportionately better showing in manufacturing than the country as a whole.

"Excepting the abnormally high valuation of manufactured output during the boom period and the wartime prices, the aggregate value of Southern manufactures in 1931, amounting to $7,364,000,000, was in excess of any other year.

"Emphasizing the comparison and the South's position in manufacturing, the total value of manufactures for the rest of the country in 1931 was $2,620,000,000 below the 1921 figures as compared with an increase of $487,000,000 for the South. Also, while the value of manufactures in the rest of the country increased 66 per cent from the prewar year 1914 to 1931, the South showed a gain of 96 per cent.

"In 1931 Southern manufacturers expended $3,929,000,000 for materials, fuel and power, or 18 per cent of the total amount expended by all the manufacturing plants of the United States."

Among development opportunities cited by the Blue Book of Southern Progress are new textile products and uses, forest products, paper making, food processing to supply some of the $1,000,000,000 worth of food and feed commodities annually purchased from outside of the South, metal, chemical and ceramic manufacturers utilizing available Southern raw materials.

These and many other subjects are presented in the 1933 Blue Book of Southern Progress which contains, as in former years, the latest available statistics dealing with the major industrial activities of the Southern States.

Electrical Refrigerator Business Increasing

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, July 13.—Orders for commercial electric refrigerating machines in June exceeded those of May by 70 per cent, breaking all records for 30-day periods in the history of the company, it was reported yesterday by F. E. Sellman, vice president of Servel Sales, Inc., of Evansville, Ind., at the Eastern headquarters of the company, 51 East Forty-second street, New York City. Mr. Sellman estimated the increase in dollar volume as 80 per cent.

"We attribute this remarkable gain in business primarily to the fact that the public is now in the frame of mind to buy equipment," Mr. Sellman stated.

Building Listed As Definitely on Upward Trend

Dun & Bradstreet Review Shows Increase for Last Quarter.

(By Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.)

New York, July 13.—After passing through more than three years of profound somnolence, the building industry now is giving evidence of definite recovery. More business property is changing hands, there is more demolition work in progress, and the inquiries for suburban homes have become more persistent during the last sixty days.

Small families now are demanding separate homes, taking the first opportunity to be free of the restricted living conditions that were forced upon them during the last few years when it was necessary to share an apartment with one or more families.

The rapid expansion of general business is favoring the revival of the building trades, which may gain sufficient stimulation before the end of the year to take a leading position among the major industries. A steady rise in the sales of properties, with the expected decline in foreclosures will have a tendency to close the gap that long has impeded recovery, according to a survey of the building industry, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Permits Rise 64.7 Per Cent

"In addition to the increasing number of better class residences and small homes being built," the survey continues, "much rehabilitation work is in progress on residential and factory premises, the contraseasonal rising trend since February being traced conclusively by the building permits.

"In May this improvement had become so pronounced that the value of building permits for that month rose to $31,522,623, a gain of 42.7 per cent over the April figure of $22,091,417.

"Moreover, the decline from May 1932, was only 8.8 per cent, the smallest decrease from the comparative month of the year preceding that has appeared in the statistics since April, 1929. The May total was the largest recorded in eleven months, and when compared with the all-time low of $17,161,943, which was touched in February, the increase was 83.7 per cent."

Monthly Building.

The monthly record of building expenditures at 215 cities of the United States for the past three years is appended herewith:

	1933	1932	1931
Jan.	$17,744,805	$42,429,065	$96,063,912
Feb.	17,161,943	40,858,938	85,895,959
Mar.	21,779,645	41,779,746	147,707,807
Apr.	22,091,417	47,741,687	152,029,067
May	31,522,023	34,866,714	123,632,095
June	.....	32,172,231	98,547,448
July	.....	27,130,469	101,553,146
Aug.	.....	27,565,795	96,431,866
Sept.	.....	30,437,268	79,589,466
Oct.	.....	26,107,428	76,929,106
Nov.	.....	29,301,309	67,604,865
Dec.	.....	23,276,690	47,582,316
Total	.....	$399,288,930	$1,158,963,273

"The increase over April was spread throughout the country rather generally, only two geographical groups, the West Central and South Atlantic, showing declines.

"New York City made a relatively better showing than the rest of the country. The total for the five boroughs being $11,352,280, over three and a half times the April total, and more than twice the amount for May of last year.

Building Costs Rising.

"The rising trend of material prices," the survey points out, "has placed the average cost of building definitely above that of this period last year. the increase is estimated conservatively at 10 per cent. Lumber has advanced at least 33 1-3 per cent since April, while roofing materials are up fully 25 per cent.

"Plumbing fixtures, pipes and fittings are up 30 per cent, radiators and boilers 25 per cent, and brass goods 20 per cent. Tile has advanced about 10 per cent and plaster from $3 to $4 a ton. While more labor is employed, and the number is being increased weekly, wage scales still are low, but are expected to advance as soon as the code of practice will have become operative in this industry. In some branches, skilled workmen are moving for a higher scale, in prospect of renewal of expiring wage agreements.

"Manufacturers now are refusing to give blanket coverages on material for future delivery, and some have withdrawn price lists entirely, pending the establishment of the new wage scales and hours to labor to accord with the provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Administration. Some suppliers of materials are printing at the bottom of their quotation sheets that prices are subject to acceptance within ten days, and at the end of that period send out a letter withdrawing unaccepted estimates."

Nats, Beaten by Chisox, 9-6, Lose Game in Race; Cronin Out a Day

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

THIS is getting serious. I mean the way the Nats are parachuting down toward the rest of the league after basking high in the stratosphere. And the way the Yankees are zooming up to meet 'em. It's a grand chance to view the situation with alarm.

Since last Sunday's bulky editions shouted out the fact that the Nats had a 4½-game lead in the pennant race, a lot has happened—chiefly to the Nats. They lost to the Indians on Monday, made it two in a row on Tuesday against the White Sox, won a game on Wednesday, and were socked by the Sox again yesterday.

Thus, with a bit of lightning calculation we find that the Nats have dropped three of their four starts and exposed themselves to the imminent danger of dropping right out of the league lead, which they now possess by the precarious margin of one game.

Six in Row for Yanks.

In the meantime, the Yankees have taken advantage of the situation to knock off six games in a row, and do a right-about face after dropping four straight. The hot breaths of the Yanks, which had cooled off a week ago, are now again on the collective necks of the Nats and it looks like a hoss race.

But the Nats were at their worst yesterday in that 9-to-6 base hit rodeo with the White Sox. They got enough bad baseball out of their system to leave them sterile for weeks. Never before this season were Washington pitchers thumped so soundly. Never before had the infield piled error on error with such frequency.

It was a bad ball game and they had no right to win it. Truth to tell, the Nats looked like the White Sox yesterday, and vice versa.

Still a Good Ball Club.

But if you ask me, the Washington Club is made of better stuff. Every club has its off days and the Nats had theirs yesterday. They're still a good ball club, perhaps a great ball club. And they're still leading the league, so it's hard to find much fault.

It's not in the books for a Washington infield to make four errors even once a week. They got enough hitting yesterday to win a couple of ball games. That narrows it down to the pitching, and the pitchers stand convicted yesterday by those 20 base knocks of the White Sox.

And the Yanks are coming. Those six straight wins are no myth. The Yanks have been knocking the ball all over the lot and they've been getting pitching. It's a hard combination to beat. Seems to me that it behooves the Nats to stir themselves a bit, or else.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

Jackie Hayes was the scourge of the Nats yesterday . . . he started three double plays that kept them away from the plate . . . Little Chad Kimsey, the Sox relief pitcher, weighs 265 on the hoof . . . Goose Goslin couldn't get a ball past Hayes in his first three trips to the plate . . . on the progressive system, Bluege should have hit a home run in the fourth . . . Cronin had singled, Schulte had doubled, and Kuhel had tripled . . . but Hayes backed up for Bluege's pop . . . Clark Griffith has protested to League President Harridge about the poor quality of balls the manufacturers are shipping . . . and inclosed, under separate cover, an egg-shaped sphere that Dave Harris flattened out with one sock . . . says a pitcher can wrap that kind of a ball around the hitter's neck . . . Fred Schulte is still the worst bunter on the club . . . barring Joe Cronin himself.

6th Straight Annexed by Yankees

NEW YORK, July 13 (A.P.).—The Yankees backed up Lefty Gomez' five-hit pitching today by bunching nine hits with as many bases on balls off Bump Hadley and Hank McDonald, to defeat the St. Louis Browns, 12 to 0. It was their sixth straight victory and their third over the Browns.

The Yanks scored five runs off Hadley in the second and another quintet off McDonald in the fourth, when Bill Dickey rammed his ninth home run of the season with two on bases.

Gomez in Fine Form.

Gomez did not allow a runner to reach third, and only one got to first in the last four innings.

The victory left the Yankees only a game behind the league-leading Washingtons, who lost to Chicago. Each has won 51 games, but the Yanks have lost 30 to Washington's 28.

Steinke Pinned by Steele in 37 Minutes

5,000 Look On, Surprised; Olsen's Toss of Hills Steals the Show.

By Frank H. Young.

RAY STEELE, the rough Californian, last night chopped down the German oak, Hans Steinke, on Griffith Stadium mat, with the approximately 5,000 fans stunned at the result. The fall, a back drop, came after 37 minutes of rought and tough rassling and just when the addicts in the stands figured Steele was about to be annihilated.

Juts a minute before the end, Steinke tossed Ray to the mat with a series of crotch holds and body slams, and Steele appeared to be about all in when he suddenly flopped his larger foe over with a fancy back drop and held him while Referee Cyclone Burns tolled off the fatal count.

Tooth Hold—It's New.

"Don't they feed you guys?" some one in the stands yelled when several of the preliminary boys apparently bit their rivals, but, according to the referees, it was merely a new hold being introduced—the tooth hold. Three of the boys tried it out in the early bouts on the card.

Although the Steinke-Steele bout was scheduled as the feature, the Swede Olsen-George Hills bout stole the show. Hills persistently used the strangle and even went so far as to threaten Referee Bennie Bortnick when the latter broke them. But Olsen took 'em and seemed to thrive on 'em. At one stage both boys were fighting outside the ring and stayed there long after the usual ten count, but they were so peeved at each other that they asked to be allowed to continue. After 14½ minutes of action, which very closely resembled fighting—although

Joe Kuhel, Card Trickster

Nats' First Baseman Is a Clever Manipulator of the Deck.

IF Joe Kuhel could do the same tricks with a baseball that he does with cards no batter would ever get past first base while he was covering it. A batter would bang out what would ordinarily be a nice, safe base hit to left field. The Nats' guardian of the No. 1 hassock would roll up his sleeves, make a few elaborate passes—and pull a ball out of the air. Can you imagine it? Well, you could if you had seen Kuhel make a deck of cards sit up and beg.

Newspaper bulb-squeezers, getting about here and there, as newspaper bulb-squeezers are wont to do, are generally pretty hard people to fool. But you should have seen Kuhel work on the Post photographer.

Drops 'Em Three Feet.

A card was dubiously accepted, looked at and replaced in the deck, which was then shuffled thoroughly and handed back to Kuhel. Joe held the pack about three feet from the floor.

"I'll drop 'em all, face down, and your card will turn over," he predicted. It did.

"Hmmm——," hummed the cameraman skeptically, as his card bounced off the floor face upward.

"Ha, ha, I know how he does that one," chortled Mrs. Kuhel, who is Joe's steady card-trick public, "but I've forgotten." Mrs. Kuhel, who has been Mrs. Kuhel for some three years, has had most of Joe's card manipulations explained to her, but she can't always remember just exactly how he does them. Or, maybe she is only helping preserve professional secrets.

"Here, take another," the photographer was requested.

"Why, that's the same one you had the first time," Kuhel informed him before he had time to replace it in the deck. It was.

Joe then went through a casual routine of mystifying prestidigitation ranging from ordinary card palming to legerdemain involving the entire deck with a demonstration of good old three-card-monte thrown in for good measure.

"I just do 'em for my own amazement," elucidated Joe.

"There's one trick Joe never has explained to me, and I can't figure out," suggested Mrs. Kuhel.

Joe offered her another chance. A card was selected and replaced in the deck, which was then thoroughly riffled. The pack was wrapped up tightly in a handkerchief. Joe held the hanky aloft by the corners and shook vigorously. The card began slowly to appear at the bottom—through handkerchief and all.

Manush's 5 Out of 5 Is Only Consolation of Loose Game.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

THE socking White Sox whacked 20 hits off four Washington pitchers yesterday, and you can draw your own conclusions. The Nats took it on the chin, in the midriff and on the lam, and Chicago took the ball game, 9 to 6.

And there was no consolation in the news from New York, where the second-place Yankees are creating a terrific suction for the Washington club with six victories in a row, the most recent of which took the form of a convincing 12-0 shellacking of the Browns.

So the Nats' once-proud lead of 4½ games, which they boasted as recently as last Sunday, has now dwindled to one lonely game, by which the Nats are teetering at the top of the American League scramble.

Sox Are Unmerciful.

It was awful out at Griffith Stadium. Never before in any single contest this season have the Nats' pitchers been subjected to such indignities as the White Sox practiced. The Sox, with a toe-hold in the batter's box and an old-fashioned grip on the willow, bashed out 13 hits off Al Thomas in 6 1-3 innings and came up with seven more against Jack Russell and Bob Burke, who attempted to finish the game without success.

But the item that made it unanimous was one of the Nats' four errors, the contribution of Bob Boken, who had been rushed into the breach at shortstop in the eighth after Manager Cronin had been struck on the left arm by one of Chad Kimsey's pitches and forced from the game.

Jack Russell Victim.

In the final analysis, it was Kimsey's relief pitching that won for Chicago, particularly the pitch that put Cronin out of the game. Boken was unequal to Al Simmons' soft double-play grounder that came his way, booted it, and gave Luke Appling the chance to bust up the ball game with a single to left that scored two runs. Jack Russell was the victim.

The Sox struck a blow yesterday for today's game, too, for the injury to Cronin, a severe bruise on the arm below the elbow, will keep him out of the last game of the series today. He will return to the line-up tomorrow.

Despite the Sox' 20-hits the Nats were not only in the ball game for seven innings, but going into the seventh they were actually leading.

Bold Lover Wins in Close Finish at Arlington Under Westrope's Good Ride

Strideaway Is Second in Feature

Clarify Falters After Setting Pace to Pull Up in Third Hole.

True Sweep Upsets Sun Mission, Favorite, in Empire Headliner.

ARLINGTON PARK, Ill., July 13 (A.P.).—In a spectacular nose finish, Col. Edward R. Bradley's Bold Lover, cleverly rated by Jockey Jack Westrope, conquered the Three D's Stable Strideaway today at Arlington Park in the top race at 1 mile.

M. L. Schwartz's Clarify set the early pace, but weakened in the final jumps to the wire, and finished third. Only five horses started. Bold Lover ran the distance in 1:36 4-5.

There was a heavy plunge on Bold Lover, which paid only $4 to win in the $2 mutuels.

The racing stewards disqualified Max Hirsch's Gay Monarch, ridden by Jockey Gilbert Elston, in the fourth event, when the horse bore over on C. V. Whitney's Sajaam, which finished second. The race was won by Prince Pompey, owned by Warren Wright, jr., of Chicago.

Form Players Suffer.

Empire City Race Track, New York, July 13 (A.P.).—Favorites fell by the wayside with regularity in the first four events decided here this afternoon. The form players tried to recoup their losses by making Sun Mission in the fourth event, most interesting event on the card, but the old fellow was not up to the task. He was beaten two lengths by W. H. Lipscomb's True Sweep, a 4-to-1 shot, which gave Jockey Don Meade another double. He had one yesterday. Bonnie Cain wound up third, four additional spans behind. The time for the mile and 70 yards was 1:46.

Meade kept his mount close to Zaidee's pace for a quarter mile and then went to the fore. Sun Mission had his speed and was being rated close up, but when Robertson asked the veteran to come on, he could not make up an inch on True Sweep, which won with ease.

Slapstick Is Winner.

Latonia, Ky., July 3 (A.P.).—Gripping finishes marked the running of the Stoner Creek and Wilmore purses, cofeatures here today. In the former C. V. Whitney's Slapstick gained the decision after a bitter duel with Laffoon & Yeiser's Flying Cadet and it was little more than a duplicate of the one in which the Parkview Stable's Cactus Rose bested E. G. Drake's Prince Drake in the Wilmore.

Slapstick led throughout the 6-furlong Stoner Creek. In the early stages the daughter of Broomstick enjoyed a clear lead, but turning for home Flying Cadet drew alongside and the Whitneyite had to give her last ounce to score by a neck. Bubbler, from the E. R. Bradley Stable, was third.

Cactus Rose and Prince Drake alternated the early lead in the Wilmore. A sixteenth from the wire Prince Drake opened a clear advantage, but tired near the end and succumbed in the last few strides. Counsellor Crane, always in closest pursuit of the leaders, easily saved the show money.

Oxon Hill Juniors Would Work.

The Oxon Hill Juniors want a game for next Sunday on their home diamond. Managers interested call Capitol Heights 31-S-22.

EVERY day is Mother's Day for Walter Price, of Santa Rosa, Calif., who has worn a carnation every day since 1876 in honor of his mother. Mr. Price led custom by 31 years when he first began to wear his daily flower. It was not until 1907 that Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, proposed the annual tribute to motherhood. Up to that time Mr. Price had worn 11,000 carnations.

The American holiday was dignified by congressional action in 1913, when both houses passed resolutions commending the observance. A year later Congress authorized the President to proclaim the second Sunday in each May as Mother's Day.

One of the prime laws of nature is the propagation of the kind—a species dies or survives according to its ability to reproduce. Animal life survives by its ability to protect its young, as the eagle, or by its vast reproductive powers, as the oyster which lays millions of eggs. Plant life survives by its hardiness, as the olive tree which lives for centuries, and by its ability to distribute seeds, as the mushroom which gives billions of spores to the wind.

The witch-hazel has, to aid its distribution of seed, a highly specialized seed pod. When the pod ripens, it contracts and presses against the seeds until they are shot out, sometimes as far as 40 feet from the parent plant.

with Bill Bennings.

Arlington Park, July 13.

Dear Al:

Well, friend, I broke the ice today. They shut me out for six races but my horses scampered home in the seventh and eighth. Pardon me for bringing it up, but you no doubt recall what I said about the Stone Martin boys being at work. Well, they were. If you don't believe it take a look at that $9.46 mutuel. They really threw it in. However, I got a respectable price of $16.52 on my Mad Career. Mike likes West Main, Banderlog, Hut, Employment and Rock Coventry.

BILL.

FIRST RACE—ADAMITE has been knocking around for some time and seems to have found the spot in this where he may graduate. BUSY SPAIN gets the No. 1 post position and is the one to beat. OUR SAILOR is well bred and may show.

SECOND RACE—My old friend, DROMBO, bites off a hard race here but is equal to such assignments when right. Might hand out a surprise package. ETECTERA and LOUIE DEAR are speedy.

THIRD RACE—I'm going back to LAMP BLACK. This one is sharp and should have won that heat the other day. UNCOMMON GOLD and ESKIMO to complete the money picture.

FOURTH RACE—TICKORY TOCK threw up the sponge the other day for some reason and a lot of real dough was burned up. I don't know what they'll tell the stewards after taking this purse. HERNANDO and SNAPLOCK for the rest of it.

FIFTH RACE—SOME POMP looks like the good thing in this sprint, both on the cold figures and on trials. I see no reason for mistakes. MISS MOUSE to take the place award from HER GOLD.

SIXTH RACE—BOILERMAKER, top weight and all, gets the Bennings call here. Like to draw Westrope and come sailing home. MR. JOE and KNIGHT'S GAL to contest for the other paynig positions.

SEVENTH RACE—BATTLING ON had a lot taken out of him rushing to the front the other day. I look for a different ride and a different result. OATEN and ED LARK to furnish most of the contention.

EIGHTH RACE—CAIUS goes for me in the final, which is no great shakes as a horse race. In fact, I haven't seen anything like this since Hot Cake beat that gang at Laurel last year. LAHOR and PAPYOGRAPH for the place and show.

Soldiers Home Wins.

Soldiers Home tossers took the measure of the Fairfax Farms Dairy nine by a score of 5-2 yesterday. Two runs in the second inning clinched the decision.

Teams Agree to Addition of 3 Players for 2d Half Race.

SANDLOT fans will have their "little world series" again this year, it was decided last night at a meeting of the teams competing in the unlimited division of the Capital City League. For some time there has been talk of playing the schedule straight through. This would have done away with the necessity of a play-off for the title. But the teams would have none of it.

The vote in favor of a split season was unanimous. Another vote was taken on the advisability of permitting teams to add new strength for the second half race. This, too, was passed unanimously. But an amendment was made to the motion to limit teams to three new players. All must be signed by July 30 to be eligible. At no time must a team carry more than 18 players while revamping its line-up.

To Capital City League officials fell the task of revising the playing schedule to fit the action of the club pilots. In order to start all contestants off together in the second half race it will be necessary to play several postponed games. For this reason only two games are scheduled Sunday. The following week all remaining games in the first half will be played and then the second half will get underway.

Not until the latter part of September will the championship series open, but the teams asserted a willingness to continue even though the schedule extended into Ooctober.

Not unlike their elder brothers in arms, the midget teams are delayed in beginning their second half race by several tie games. Washington Maid tops the league with four victories and one defeat. However, the Eastern A. C., which has two ties to play off, has a chance of overtaking the leaders. The junior teams already are playing their second half and the championship series in this division should open early in August.

Pirates Rally in Eighth To Down Braves, 8-3

Pittsburgh, July 13 (A.P.).—Five Pirate hits combined with two Boston errors in an eighth-inning outbreak today produced five runs, breaking a 3-3 tie and giving Pittsburgh an 8-to-3 victory over the Braves.

Yanks Gain Game; Nats Are Beaten

6 to 4. And then the Sox came again with a rush. They tied it with 2 runs in the seventh, went ahead with 2 runs in the eighth and scored 1 in the ninth for no good reason.

The lone gleam of joy for Washington throughout the drab afternoon was Heinie Manush's string of five hits. There was plenty to beef about.

There was Ossie Bluege's error in the first on the throw-in after Manush lost Kress' triple in the sun, that gave the Sox the first run, and there was a ball that went through Buddy Myer's legs that figured in a two-run uprising in the fifth. And then, there was that Boken thing in the eighth.

The Nats had put themselves in the ball game in the fourth inning with four runs off Paul Gregory, two of which counted on Joe Kuhel's steaming triple to right center. The other two counted after Hayes' bum throw to the plate skipped past Berry on an easy force play, and the Nats had a 4-to-1 lead.

In a little while the Sox had tied it up on four straight hits by the top of the batting order in the fifth and Swanson's single that scored Berry an inning later. Heinie Manush put the Nats in 6-to-4 lead with a sizzling triple to dead center with two on base, and then the Sox started smacking Thomas, Burke and Russell all over the well-known lot.

fighting, of course, is not allowed in the District—Olsen uncorked a series of flying mares, and Hills heard the birdies sing.

Sol Slagel, a newcomer here, also gave the fans plenty of kick. He is a contortionist of the Fritz Kley type, and, after making Lou Plummer look foolish, dumped him with several successive flying mares in the elapsed time of 14 minutes.

Little Beaver, from the Cherokee Indian Reservation of North Carolina, battled Karl Davis to a 30-minute draw, while the haters of Frank Speers—and there were about 5,000 of them present—had the extreme pleasure of seeing Jim McMillan toss him with a crotch and body slam in 30½ minutes. Everything but murder was committed in this bout, listed as the semifinal.

Hecht Co. Officials Stage Annual Golf Tourney and Field Day

Goodman Wins in Hecht Co. Tourney

ANOTHER Goodman wins a golf championship!

This time it was Mose H. Goodman, general manager of the Hub, Hecht Co. store in Baltimore, who won the annual golf tournament for executives of the Hecht stores yesterday at the Manor course.

Tied with Malcolm Hecht, vice president, also of Baltimore, Goodman triumphed in an extra-hole play-off, scoring a nifty par 5 to his opponent's 6.

At the end of the 18-hole journey—it was a journey for these executives—Goodman shot a 94—20—74, and Hecht a 93—19—74.

Unfortunately, Hecht did not win second prize. They were so anxious to dispose of the prizes they decided that only the winner of the play-off would be rewarded.

As a result, two Washington executives came in for the other two prizes. H. J. Grinsfelder, ready-to-wear merchandiser, won second honors with 94—19—75, while C. B. Dulcan, general merchandising manager and vice president, emerged third with 96—20—76.

Mose S. Hecht, president of the corporation, traveled nine holes. Hecht's birdie deuce on the 153-yard second hole proved one of the day's big features.

It was a disastrous day for the president's son, Henry, who won the title last year. He shot a 113 gross, and his 10 handicap gave him a 103 net.

After all is said and done, Malcolm Hecht is the best medal player. No one touched his 93.

British All Square With Australians

the tennis world by reason of recent defeats of Ellsworth Vines and Henri Cochet, sent the Anzacs away to a lead with a 4—6, 6—2, 6—2, 6—3 victory over Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, but Fred Perry evened accounts for the mother country by turning back young Vivian McGrath in straight sets, 6—2, 6—4, 6—2.

With much depending on the outcome of the doubles tomorrow, Australia today named Crawford and Adrian Quist, another youngster, to oppose the veteran English internationalists, Perry and Patrick Hughes. The selection of Quist came somewhat as a surprise as McGrath was expected to pair with the Wimbledon champion as he did in the English championships. The shift, however, will leave McGrath fresh for his singles match against Austin, Saturday.

The surprise of today's play was not so much Crawford's victory, that was expected, but that Austin was able to take one set from the lanky Australian. Seemingly able to do no wrong, Austin played as if inspired, serving well and driving deep to his opponent's back-hand corner to reel off a lead of four games to two in the first set and then went on to take the set, much to the surprise of the small crowd of 2,000, which was held down by a drizzling rain which postponed the opening of the tie for more than an hour.

Ladies to See Nats, Chisox in Finale

Crowder and Gaston Due to Hurl; Boken Will Play at Short.

By Frank H. Young.

"GENERAL" AL CROWDER positively will appear on the mound for the Nats this afternoon, Manager Joe Cronin announced last night shortly after receiving the good news that there was no break in his arm as a result of letting it collide with one of Chad Kimsey's fast ones yesterday. Cronin previously had declared the General as his starter yesterday, but then remembered that it was Al Thomas' turn and suddenly changed his plans. In view of what happened to Thomas, he probably feels that it was unfortunate that his memory was so accurate.

So the ladies' day fans, enjoying their second free game of the week, will see the Nats' mound ace in action in today's finale of the White Sox series. Milton Gaston, former Washington hurler, likely will toil for the Sox, although Skipper Lou Fonseca intimated last night that he was considering giving Lefty Walter Miller another crack at the Croninless Cronins. It seems that the Nats are about the only team Miller can beat. He did so while holding them to two hits on his last visit here and beat them again in the opener of the current series.

With Cronin due to watch the game from the bench, due to his injury, Bob Boken probably will fill in for him at short.

The Nats are grabbing time by the fetlock and not waiting for old Joe Slump to hit them. In the hope of keeping him away, they have drafted young Cal Griffith as batting practice pitcher. He did much of the pregrame hurling on the last Western trip and on the profitable one-day visit to New York which followed, so the boys feel he may bring them luck by being back on the job again. He started back to work yesterday, but his jinx-chasing failed to take effect, it seems.

Pitcher John Campbell, purchased from the Albany club Wednesday, must have got lost en route here. He was due to show up yesterday, but failed to put in an appearance.

Swanson did some fancy hustling to get back in time for Cronin's looper almost to the score board in the second.

Jimmy Dykes, the Baron of Bryn Mawr, was a lost ball at bat for the Sox during the first half of the game. He ended the first with a pop-foul with two on, the third with another with three on, and the fifth with still another with two on. When he finally hit, in the seventh, the bases were empty and two were dead.

Goslin had his first chance afield in the seventh. Haas, of the visitors, had none throughout the game.

Homer by Hale Lets Indians Beat A's

Rookie Also Singles Home Two Mates in Fourth as Tribe Wins, 6-5.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13 (A.P.).—O'Dell Hale broke up a see-saw ball game by hitting a home run with one on base in the eighth inning and giving the Cleveland Indians a 6-to-5 triumph over the Athletics today.

Hale's home run was a terrific smash that sent the ball over the double-decked stands in left field.

Hale also singled two runs across the rubber in the fourth inning. Earl Averill hit for the circuit in the opening inning. The Mackmen outhit the Indians, 14 to 11.

Top figures are high tide. First figures are A. M., others P. M.

The above predictions give the times the water is high and low. Slack water (time of turn of current) occurs somewhat later. In Chesapeake Bay, midchannel, between Chesapeake Beach and Annapolis, flood and ebb currents begin about 3 to 4 hours after low and high water, respectively, by the shore. At other places given in the table slack waters occur from ½ to 1½ hours after times of low and high water.

Vergez Homer in Ninth Wins for Giants

League Leaders Keep Lead of 3 Games, Defeating Cardinals, 3 to 2.

ST. LOUIS, July 13 (A.P.).—Johnny Vergez banged the first homer the Giants have made in ten games of their current road trip in the ninth inning today and gave the league leaders a 3-to-2 victory over the Cardinals.

The triumph kept New York three games ahead of the Chicago Cubs and dropped the Cards into fourth place, a half game behind the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Besides winning the game with his circuit drive, Vergez played a prominent part all the way in the mound duel between Carl Hubbell and Tex Carleton. He hit a double in the sixth inning to drive in Manager Bill Terry with the second Giant run and put the New Yorkers ahead.

Bicycle Craze Hits Capital In Full Speed

Hundreds, Half of Them Women and Girls, Take to Sport Revival.

Out of the West has come the bicycle craze and Washington has been hit hard. Hollywood recently took to the "bike," both for business and pleasure, and the extent to which bicyclitis has spread since it came to the District is illustrated by the fact that a large department store has installed a specially constructed parking rack for its two-wheeled patrons.

The Capital, with its vast parks and boulevards, is proving a paradise to hundreds of newcomers to the sport here. There are no regulations to "cramp their style" in the parks and any secluded path or by-way is theirs for the pedaling.

New models, with their glistening frames, electric lights, balloon tires and parcel carriers, are a far cry from the queer contraptions which Aunt Sarah and grandpop labored with years ago. When the "safety" type came into being in the 80's, it was thought the last word had been written in the bicycle's development. But the "safety" of the Gay Nineties, compared with the 1933 type, evoke as much laughter as the rider's Victorian garb.

Tandem Returns.

Run through the family album and see if this isn't so.

Probably the most interesting development, especially to those who "remember when," is the tandem's triumphant return. While few dealers have ordered the two-seaters so far, a large number of enthusiasts are renting them by the hour.

Sears, Roebuck, whose Blandensburg road store has a bicycle parking space for its patrons, says it has shipped more bicycles thus far this year than any year in its history.

Bicycle factories which have been operating far below capacity are now calling back thousands of employes for full time work.

"This boost in the bicycle business," said one executive, "is reflected in the manufacture of raw materials.—Because of the upturn, bicycle makers and distributors have stocked their store rooms with large supplies of rubber tires in the belief that the price would go up on this article."

Lower Prices Prevail.

Lower prices have had much to do with the revival. Today an excellent wheel may be bought for $30. In the old days $70 to $100 was the price.

Almost half the riders are women and girls, and many of them, exercising their new freedom, use men's models.

The value of the bicycle in business has persisted despite inroads made by the automobile. An army of messenger boys, policemen, deliverymen and parcel carriers are carried thousands of miles daily by bicycle over streets and highways, parks and dirt roads in the Capital and environs.

Eighteen beats—all but Rock Creek and Potomac parks and Meridian Hills and the Mount Vernon highway—are covered on bicycle by park policemen.

Washington is pumping a mean pedal. Whether it will last only as a fad or hold its gains and advance still further remains to be seen.

Bicycle First Used As Word in Patent

The word "bicycle" was first used in its modern spelling in a patent issued more than 64 years ago, long before the automobile's advent. Bysycle, bicircle (still prevalent in Brooklyn), and bicycular velocipede are variations of the word.

Prior to 1870, whatever evolutionary form the machine took was usually called a velocipede, from the Latin, which means, literally, swift foot.

7,573 Patents Covered Bicycles.

The extent of bicycle experimentation in the nineteenth century is shown by the fact 7,573 patents were granted in the United States alone up to 1900 for bicycles and parts. Only 16 were issued before 1865, most coming after 1890.

Bicycling in the 80's and Today

Post Staff Photos.

These photos of bicycles old and new span a third of this Nation's history. Pictured above is Betty Owen parking her transportation at Sears, Roebuck's bicycle rack, the latest convenience for Capital shoppers. Scene below harks back more than a half century to horse cars, bustles and free lunches. Clifford R. Munger tames an obstreperous "Star" which is about twice his age and seems to enjoy it. This type of wheel in its day was called an "ordinary." Now it is a phenomenon, with its solid tires, rachet crank, belt drive and hand brake.

First U. S. Bicycles Patterned From British

Bicycle riding in the United States was virtually nonexistent between 1870 and 1876, the year of the Centennial Exposition. A few English-make models were imported in that year, and a Bostonian built a wheel, fasioned after the British patterns, which weighed 70 pounds and cost $313.

Col. Albert A. Pope, also of Boston, is America's manufacturing pioneer and trail blazer in this field. He had the Weed Sewing Machine Co., of Hartford, Conn., make some models in their plant. These were the first bicycles produced in the United States.

Radio Dial Flashes

By Robert D. Heinl.

COLUMBIA put over a fast one on its rival, the National Broadcasting Co., by bringing the voice of Air Minister Gen. Italo Balbo into Washington yesterday afternoon shortly after the Italian seaplanes arrived in Shediac, New Brunswick. What the cause of the N. B. C. fall-down was is not known but Columbia had Gen. Balbo all to itself for about a half an hour.

It was a surprise broadcast with no time to give listeners advance notice. The air minister declared that speaking into a microphone was not a natural thing for him to do and he would much rather fly. The cheering crowds could be distinctly heard and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed.

How great a part efficient radio communications may play in aerial warfare to come and in peace-time transoceanic flying is now being demonstrated by the Royal Italian Seaplane Squadron. Ever since starting for the United States the fliers have maintained satisfactory two-way communication with both Rome and the Mackay radio station in New York.

It has been learned that for several days prior to its take-off in Italy the R. I. S. S. was in complete touch with New York, 4,500 miles away in another hemisphere. The planes were poised for the start on the lake at Orbetello, and it is believed that this is a new distance record for radio communication with an airplane not in flight.

Despite the lightness of their radio sets, which, of necessity, could not bulk large or weigh heavily in the planes, they are able to maintain the slender thread of communication unbroken.

Gen. Balbo's squadron is at present over Canada. Upon arrival at Montreal, through the courtesy of the Canadian Radio Commission, a description of its descent will be broadcast to Americans by both of our networks. In addition, there is the possibility that planes will fly out to meet them and begin broadcasting a description of the squadron while yet in flight.

The idea of planes bearing radio announcers out to describe events was early suggested by Floyd Gibbons in his prophecy of the next war, "The Red Napoleon." In it the great metropolitan dailies, ever anxious to be of service to their readers, sent out trained correspondents by air over the battlefields to describe the fighting as it looked from above. In that way millions of homes were kept informed of the action's progress.

JANE FROMAN, radio soprano, and Howard Marsh, tenor star of musical comedy and operetta, will be costarred on a new series of twice-weekly broadcasts over WJSV. The first program will be heard tonight at 9:30 o'clock. Subsequent programs will be broadcast on Wednesdays and Fridays at the same time. Miss Froman will sing in the Wednesday night shows, and Marsh will hold the spotlight on Fridays. Jacques Renard's orchestra will accompany the stars as well as being heard in their own renditions of popular tunes.

Miss Froman is known for her work on the air in previous programs. Marsh, who has appeared in many musical productions, played the role of Prince Karl Franz in the operetta, "The Student Prince," in which he sang in New York and throughout the country for several years.

When Robert Garland, well-known dramatic critic, is interviewed this afternoon about "The Ten Worst Plays of the Year" over the WJZ network (but not WMAL), he will present not only one but two lists of "worst plays."

The real dregs of the season, according to Garland, who will be heard at 4 p. m., were the shoestring productions which lasted for one or two nights and whose titles are now forgotten even by their producers. In addition to his list of these stage mavericks, the veteran critic will name ten other plays which had some measure of success, but which he claims were "pretty awful." In his list, Garland will take direct issue with Burns Mantle, fellow critic and commentator, on some of the plays which the latter listed as "best" in his recent talk over a network.

THE final report of the results of the campaign to reduce cotton acreage will be given tonight. George N. Peek, administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, will speak over WJSV at 10:15 o'clock. Cully A. Cobb, director of the administration, will talk over WMAL at 10:30.

The Pickens Sisters, who open today at Warner Brothers Earle Theater in conjunction with the screen presentation of "Mayor of Hell," represents two generations of musicians. The newest harmony singing sensations of the radio come from a family of musicians—their paternal grandfather, the late Monte Pickens, well known as a concert violinist throughout the South, for his technique and beauty of tone. The three girls—Helen, Jane and Patti—were trained by their father at an early age, so that when Helen was 4, Jane 6 and Patti 8, they were accustomed to singing before large audiences, and their repertoire included a wide variety of songs.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt will address the governors' conference in San Francisco over both networks Tuesday at 11 p. m. He will speak from the White House, his voice being transmitted to the conference hall in the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, by special wires.

A SPECIAL program by Negro composers, sung by a chorus of 1,000 Negroes from the Middle West, will be the feature of a broadcast during the Lakeside Festival of Song over the WEAF network at 9 p. m.

The program, a portion of which is scheduled for WRC at 9:20 o'clock, will originate from the floating theater in the North Lagoon at A Century of Progress, in Chicago, and the bleachers lining the west shore. The giant choir is built around the famous Munday Choristers and includes eight groups from Chicago, two from Evanston, the Gary Community Chorus, Lincoln University Glee Club and the St. Louis Century of Progress chorus.

Alexander Semmler, pianist, will feature the First Movement of the Sonata for Piano, by Adolph Weiss, during his recital over WJSV at 2:15 p. m. Semmler will open his program with Bach's Prelude and Fugue in F sharp major, and conclude the recital with Debussy's "Arabesque" No. 2.

Phil Harris, originally scheduled to remain in Galveston for only three broadcasts on his new "Let's Listen to Harris" program, has been held over by the success of his appearances there, and the programs tonight and next Friday night, accordingly, will originate in the Texas city. (WMAL, 8 o'clock.)

Phil, after his sensationally rapid triumphs in movies and in the Cocoanut Grove, Hollywood, headed East and started on his Nationwide radio program with Leah Ray. His trek toward Chicago has apparently assumed the proportions of a triumphal procession.

THE story behind the French stamp bearing the legend, "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," will be dramatized in the "Bastille Day" presentation of the Stamp Adventurers Club over WJSV at 6 o'clock this afternoon.

Old Faces.

IN THE album, velvet bound, many ancient friends appear, and such whiskers there are found, as you'll not behold this year. Faces that were doubtless fair in original design, are all cluttered up with hair—no one ever drew the line. There are sideboards long and deep, which would now be thought a sin, and all kinds of whiskers sweep in a cascade from the chin. There are whiskers snowy white, there are whiskers dusty gray, and the owners, thus bedight, wore them both by night and day. There are whiskers long and straight, there are curly whiskers, too; and they're all as out of date as the warthog at the zoo. It is hard to realize as we gaze upon these chaps that sane people thought it wise thus to decorate their maps. It is hard to understand why a man of charm and grace should attempt to grow a stand of pink whiskers on his face. It is all so sad and strange, and we think with furtive tears, how all human fashions change in the passing of the years. In those bygone ancient days man was deeply in disgrace if he found he couldn't raise some alfalfa on his face. Now a bearded chin or cheek makes a man a laughing stock; people say he is a freak, as they throw a brick or rock.

German Ballots To Tell Fate of Protestantism

All of Federal Appointed Commissioners to Be Removed Today.

Berlin, July 13 (A.P.).—General church elections were ordered today for July 23 to place Protestantism's fate directly in the hands of individual church members.

Announcement of the calling of the elections came simultaneously with revelation by a close friend of the Rev. Friedrich von Bodelschwingh, Evangelical Reich Bishop, that all church commissioners appointed by federal or state governments will be removed tomorrow. The number includes Ludwig Mueller, who is commissary head of the Evangelical Church Union.

(Chancellor Hitler Wednesday telegraphed to President von Hindenburg at the executive's summer home that "the inner liberty of the church is placed beyond doubt by the withdrawal of the commissioners." He added: "Reconstruction work will presently be completed through free election by the church people.")

The election decision contrasted sharply with the demand of the Nazi German Christians that no popular ballot should be taken, but that reorganization of the church should be ordered and executed from the top.

The Nazi church group, which opposed the election of Von Bodelschwingh late in May and has contended that 80 per cent of church officials from elders up should be Nazis, sponsored the drawing up this week of a new Protestant constitution. An announcement that it represented unanimous agreement among the church groups was followed by indications from adherents of Von Bodelschwingh that the church heads had concurred only on two conditions: That the commissioners be withdrawn and that the leaders ousted by the state commissioners be reinstated.

Counterfeit Suspect Escapes in New York

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—A Federal prisoner awaiting trial on a charge of counterfeiting escaped from the Federal House of Detention today, and, although police squad cars roared through the district a few minutes later, he disappeared in crowded Greenwich Village.

The prisoner, William Clune, 35, slipped through an unscreened second-floor window of the detention house at Eleventh and West streets, lowered himself to a ledge 5 feet below, hung to this by his hands for a moment, police said, and then dropped 15 feet to the sidewalk.

Treasury Puts Own Receiver In Park Bank

Department Steals Jump on Depositors Who Ask Court Appointment.

The Treasury Department yesterday apparently had gained the upper hand in its struggle with depositors for control of affairs of the closed Park Savings Bank here.

As four depositors and creditors of the defunct bank were petitioning the District Supreme Court to appoint a receiver, the department already had placed a man of its own choice in charge. He is John F. Moran, whom the department has designated to take over the bank from the conservator, J. L. Bailey, as receiver.

Representatives of the depositors' committee were not informed of the Treasury's latest move until 2:30 yesterday afternoon. Apparently, the committee was taken completely by surprise. The Treasury Department, on the other hand, had full knowledge of the committee's intention to file suit, it was stated.

The Treasury's receiver is said by department officials to have complete control, and is expected to proceed with liquidation of the bank. The depositors' committee contends that the department has no authority to manage the bank's affairs, that the interests of depositors are served best by action of their group.

The depositors, through Attorneys E. Hilton Jackson and William E. Richardson, charged that the bank's charter, secured in Alabama in 1909, had expired in 1929 and that from that date on the institution was engaged unlawfully in the banking business.

The petitioners, Joseph W. Thompson, Mary E. Allan, Harry A. Rearick and Anna V. Livingstone, named 35 defendants. The list included all the directors and officers of the bank, the conservator, J. L. Bailey, and a group of stockholders. By representation all stockholders were included as defendants with the assertion that their names were unknown, but that they were included because of their possible liabilities.

It was contended that since the bank should have liquidated when its charter expired, the funds then on deposit or deposited afterward, should be declared a special trust, and as such should be taken over by the court and expended proportionately to the 14,000 depositors.

Another declaration was that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was a principal creditor because of heavy advances and that Bailey, now in charge, was a Government appointee. This situation, it was claimed, was inequitable, since the Government was placed in the position of having its own agent placed in charge, indirectly, of a huge claim to the detriment of the other creditors.

3 Men Seized In White Slave Investigation

U. S. Agents and Police Rescue Woman Telling of Ring's Brutality.

A story of brutal treatment at the hands of white slavers was told to Department of Justice agents yesterday by alleged victims of the ring. A raid in an apartment at 1018 Eighteenth street northwest, which resulted in the arrest of three men and a woman, is believed to have halted the operations.

The men held are Louis Rolando, 30 years old; James Rooney, 39 years old, a machinist, and Arthur Piazzi, alias Brazzi, a telegrapher, all of the Eighteenth street address. One of the alleged victims of the ring, Anna Haines, 20 years old, of Sunbury, Pa., was taken to the House of Detention.

The Department of Justice entered the case when operatives in Philadelphia learned that two minors had been forcibly brought to Washington and compelled to lead an immoral life. When their earnings failed to satisfy the alleged white slavers, they were threatened with knives and guns, they said.

The girls were brought here from Lancaster and Sunbury, Pa. Two of them returned to their homes. The information was obtained by the Department of Justice and the raid by its operatives and local police followed.

The men will be given a hearing today before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on charges of violating the Mann act.

Many 'On Sale' Beer Licensees Are in Danger

125 Delicatessen and Drug Store Owners Fail to Obey Regulations.

Approximately 125 delicatessens and a scattering of drug stores will lose their "on sale" beer licenses unless they conform to the strict definition of restaurants, the Beverage Permits Board revealed yesterday.

In addition, a half-dozen temporary permits will be revoked today by the District Commissioners unless the holders pay their June taxes prior to the 10 o'clock meeting. The tax assessor was making a final check late yesterday preparatory to submitting a list of delinquents.

Following a tour of some of the more doubtful temporary "on sale" establishments yesterday, members of the board revealed that they would insist upon a strict observance of regulations governing "on sale" permits in acting on permanent licenses. This mean that probably half of the delicatessens and a scattering of drug stores which do not have separate rooms for serving food will not be approved.

The Beverage Permits Board is prepared to send between 75 and 100 approved permits to the Commissioners today or tomorrow for reissuance as annual licenses. This will be the first lot of temporary permits to be acted upon though a few annual licenses have been issued on applications received since June 1.

Because of the magnitude of the job of inspecting the more than 2,000 temporary permits, it appeared yesterday that many of the holders of these conditional licenses may not get annual permits for several months. The permits are being reconsidered in the order of their issuance on a temporary basis.

The Commissioners have authority to revoke temporary permits at will and without granting a hearing though they must allow hearings when they revoke annual licenses.

The board is having no difficulty with "off-sale" license holders, nor is it finding any other large scale irregularities outside the efforts of delicatessens to pose as restaurants. A few cases of police records have been found, however, and may lead to revocations.

Lorton Rebels Go to Atlanta Prison Tonight

Heavily Armed Guard Will Be Used to Prevent Escape Attempt.

A heavily armed detail of Washington policemen and Lorton reformatory guards will leave tonight for the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary with the first group of refractory prisoners, recently involved in a near insurrection at the Virginia penal institution.

It is believed the shipment of prisoners will clear the troubled atmosphere at Lorton during the past fortnight. The first batch of prisoners represent the main group of threatened troublemakers.

Capt. M. M. Barnard, general superintendent of District penal institutions, last night declined to divulge the hour of departure for "obvious reasons." The armed escort is well prepared for trouble, he added.

Included in the guard detail will be six Washington policemen. A constant guard from the Metropolitan Police Department has been kept at Lorton since the near riot.

A second group of "bad" inmates will be sent to the Federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., within the next few days, it was made known. Capt. Barnard decided on the switch to "clean out" his institution and avert any further trouble.

Artist Spending Summer Days Away From Her Downtown Studio.

A gentle sorceress is luring scores of Washington youngsters to play around the Joaquin Miller cabin in Rock Creek Park.

She is Miss Pherne Miller, niece of the "poet of the Sierras." And in the long summer afternoons the youngsters gather around and ask about "the ghost" of the bearded poet that local legend once said hovered around the cabin.

The niece of the man who wrote "Columbus," that every schoolchild knows, has decided to spend her summer days in the cabin of her uncle. An artist of considerable ability, Miss Miller maintains a studio downtown. Sometimes her children's classes come to the cabin to take their lessons.

Miss Miller was working on a piece of tapestry she is dedicating to her new found friends. It delineates the traditional foes among the animal kingdom. An elephant is shown in sudden fright at a tiny mouse and a tortoise is eying a hare with contempt.

As she traced out the various characters the children gazed with undisguised wonder or glee.

Then the reporter, the cameraman and the children all trooped into the cabin. The long main room in the rear is replete with photographic records of the career of the poet of the Sierras. A register tells of the thousands who come yearly to see the last home of the famous poet.

While the children listened, Miss Miller told the "Ghost" stories and admitted that so far she has failed to see the specter of her poet relative, even in the depth of dusk when the crickets chirp eerily along the nearby creek.

The Miller cabin was erected by the poet himself many years ago while he was doing journalistic work in Washington. It was built originally at Sixteenth street and Crescent place, or rather where those streets are now. Miller made his way by a footpath, daily, into the Capital to get his grist of news.

In 1913, just before the death of the great poet, friends of Miller had the cabin moved to its present location.

It was in the main room of the cabin now in Rock Creek Park, that Miller wrote the famed poem, "The Bravest Battle Ever Fought," an ode dedicated to the mothers of men who see their sons go off to war and death.

Aphasia Victim, Veteran, Back At Home Here

L. M. Price Recalls War as He Loses His Identity in Maryland Storm.

Memories of a war-torn battle field, bursting shells and breathless suspense, came back through the years to a shell-shocked veteran of the World War, who Tuesday night stumbled into the Annapolis, (Md.) police headquarters to tell a strange story of lost identity following a terrific electrical storm along the Defense Highway.

Registered at the Annapolis Emergency Hospital as a victim of aphasia, the mysterious stranger was identified yesterday as L. Milton Price, recently released from the Naval Hospital here. C. C. Crockett, of this city, read newspaper accounts of the man's plight and told Maryland authorities he lived with his mother, Mrs. Alice H. Price at 3509 Fourteenth street northwest.

Near exhaustion, Mr. Price made his way to the Annapolis police station shortly before midnight Tuesday, and said he could remember nothing prior to an electrical storm on the Defense Highway. A bolt of lightening struck near him, he said, and he continued on to Annapolis in a daze.

Mr. Price, who is 34 years old, served throughout the World War. He saw action in many of the major encounters in France. Only last week he was discharged from the Naval Hospital. The lightning crash is believed to have aggravated his shell-shocked condition.

The initial "L. M. P.," engraved on a belt buckle, were the only marks of identification found on his person. Mr. Crockett, a family friends, read his description in newspapers and immediately went to Annapolis.

Mr. Price was returned to his mother's home last night. He is married. It was learned that his wife, Mrs. Frances Wright Price, is vacationing at Sherwood Forest, near Annapolis.

It is the belief of friends that Mr. Price was en route to visit his wife when caught in the storm. He told police he sought shelter under a bridge when the storm broke. A vivid flash of lightning and terrific thunder crashes brought on the aphasia condition, physicians declared.

Police recalled seeing Mr. Price wandering about Annapolis several hours before he went to headquarters.

Defiberizing

That's the Process, Learned From Nature, That Aids Search for Warmth.

It's the "dead air spaces" which make feathers and fur such satisfactory coverings for fowls and animals—and now that the secret is out, it seems mere man may utilize it in housing himself.

The national committee on wood utilization of the Department of Commerce reports that science has duplicated this principle of insulation in a degree even surpassing nature. By a process of "defiberizing" vegetable matter, such as cornstalks, bagasse, wheat and flax straw, or wood, and then processing the fibers into boards, blankets or "loose fill," so as to provide as much "dead air space" as possible, the committee reports that a number of excellent insulating products have been produced. These products are used as "overcoats" for houses.
